can be protracted, by proper means, to an indefinite length of time. The twain were seated at the breakfast table. Mr. Thornton looked dubiously at the burned and dried steak on the platter before him, made a wry face at the cup of coffee, took one mouthful of the clammy, leathery toast, and then spoke:

'My dear Helen.'

'Well Mr. Thornton.'

'Did you ever eat any of mother's bread?'

'No—why do you ask?'

'Because she makes the best biscuit I ever saw.'

'Undoubtedly! A man's mother is generally his wife's superior in everything. I only wonder he is ever persuaded to leave her!'

'I am the first time she had ever spoken sarcastically, and Henry was puzzled.'

'I merely referred to my mother because she superintended the bread making herself. I wish you could be induced to do the same.'

'The lady lifted her taper fingers.'

'Do you really wish me to put my hands in pie crust, and bury my arm in dough, Mr. Thornton?'

'No—not exactly, my love; but you could overlook Biddy, and teach her to make better stuff than this,' he added, pointing to the toast. 'That wouldn't spoil your hands, would it?'

'I don't know how; besides, Biddy don't want me in the kitchen, and I am not particularly attracted there. I don't mean to spend all of her small white hands. He never once asked himself if these same hands could iron a shirt, make bread, or mend a pair of socks.'

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 5th, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

To our Patrons and Friends. We cheerfully extend the congratulations of the season. May health, happiness and prosperity attend you through the incoming year, surrounded by all the blessings which it is the lot of mortals to enjoy.

Congress. The House is still engaged in the interesting struggle to elect a Speaker; one hundred ballottings have already been made with no better prospect of success than at our last issue. The President became impatient at this procrastination, and considering that the interests of the country would suffer by any further delay, wisely transmitted to both Houses of Congress his Annual Message. We have not had time to give it the attention, which it merits—but the press we observe, with but few exceptions, speak very favorably of it.

Opening of a New Literary Emporium. Messrs. Fetridge & Co. have opened their new and extensive establishment to their friends and the public.

The store is situated at No. 100 Washington Street, between State and Water streets, and is in every way fitted to its purpose, and a monument to the enterprise of its proprietors.

FORRESTER'S Boys' and Girls' Magazine. This favorite of the little folks, published by Messrs. Rand, 7 Cornhill, Boston, really deserves its popularity with the important class for which it is so admirably designed. It inculcates useful and moral lessons, by interesting, chaste, and pleasant stories, and handsome pictures, thus uniting instruction with delight.

Special Notices.

There will be a meeting of the Adams Library Association at the usual place, on MONDAY EVENING, January 7th, at 7 o'clock.

The members are notified that this is their Annual Meeting for the choice of Officers. A full attendance is solicited as they are to take decisive measures preparatory to having a Lawyer.

Per order,
JOSEPH W. HARDWICK, Secretary.

Quincy, Jan. 5. 1w

NOTICE. "The Social Party at the Hancock House."

This Party will hold their Second Levee, on Friday Evening next, 11th instant.

"A Good Time" may be expected.

White's Quadrille Band will be in attendance.

We wish Messrs. F. & Co. every prosperity.

Wonderful discoveries succeed each other so rapidly in the present age that we scarcely recover from the astonishment caused by one before our credulity is taxed by the announcement of another still more astounding. And among the most important discoveries which have ever been made in medical science, we may number that of G. W. Stone's Liquid Cathartic, a Family Physician in the most desirable form, perfectly agreeable to the taste, and a reliable remedy in almost every disease to which the human race are subject. Its merits cannot be too highly extolled. Indeed it may be called the panacea. Its efficacy in the cure of the following complaints, will be readily admitted by all who give it a trial, viz: Habitual Costiveness, Affections of the Liver, Impurity of the Blood, Piles, Epilepsy, Scrofulous and all other humors, Dyspepsia, Bilious Affections, Dysentery, Diarrhea, and all other diseases of the bowels will be completely removed by its use.

In short, it will renovate the whole system and place it in a condition to resist the attack of all contagious diseases. Let those who do not enjoy perfect health resort at once to the use of this medicine, and that great blessing will be at once restored to them.

Farewell to the Old School-house.

Oh! stoop o'er us more kindly,
Ye dear old walls, we pray;
Hear ye not the sound of sorrowing
That mingles in our lay?
Fall many a lad and maiden
Have gone from you for ye,
But never ALL your children,
As we must do to day.
Farewell, forever!
We've loved you full well;
Sadly we gather here,
Sighing farewell!

No more we'll roam these entries,
Or from the well-worn form,
Watch through the same old windows,
The beating of the storm.
Yet how each nook and corner
Is painted on the heart!
There's joy as well as sadness
In memory's magic art.
Farewell, forever!
We've loved you full well;
Sadly we gather here,
Sighing farewell!

And shall we not, dear school mates,
Amid the cares of life,
Find out some sweet recess time,
When loosed from all its strife,
We'll trip adown the year-steps,
Into the old play yard,
And sing and shout 'till the School-house,'
First in youth's regard!
Farewell, forever!
We've loved you full well;
Sadly we gather here,
Sighing farewell!

Hope.

A rainbow bent from a morning cloud,
And laid'd the dewy earth,
Smiled like an angel visitant,
Through the tears that gave it birth;
And midway in the crimson'd sky,
Its mellow'd lustre met the eye.

Thus Hope's bright rainbow, like a gleam
Of sunlight glowing there,
Attracts the soul-worn child of earth
From life's tornough and care;
And when through grief he sighs for Heaven,
He sees it in his prayer,
And thus enjoys tho' here depressed,
A foretaste of that place of rest.

God's Mercy.

The night is mother of the day,
The winter of the spring;
And even upon old decay
The greenest mosses cling.
Behind the cloud the starlight lurks,
Though showers the sunbeams dim;
For God, who loveth all his works,
Has left his hope with all.

Masculine and Feminine.

In England, rivers all are males—
For instance, Father Thames—
Whoever in Columbia sails,
Finds them ma amazons or dames.

Yes, there the softer sex presides,
Aquatic, I see ye,
And Mrs. Sippy rolls her tides, Responsive to Miss Sour.

Aurora.

A lover knelt to maiden fair,
And wou'd her fond admirer—
Ah! wot thou love me sweetest one,
Thou bright and fair Aurora!

Up sprang the blood of maiden fair,
Who b'd her fond admirer—
How dare you, sir, miscall me thus!
Me—me, indeed, a roarer!

Auroras.

It is an astonishing thing how little a master will sometimes disconcert a man who is accustomed to speak in public, and to have his thoughts about him, and ready at command on almost all occasions.

"I was once opening a speech from the stump," said a distinguished western orator to us recently, and was just beginning to warm with my subject, when a remarkably clear and deliberate voice spoke out behind me, saying:

"Guess he wouldn't talk quite so bifurcating, if he knew that his trousers were but'st clean out behind!"

"From that moment I couldnt get on.—The people in front began to laugh, and there was a loud roar in my rear, and I dared not reverse my position for fear of having a new audience of my condition. I made or rather invented an excuse for delay, and sat down. The malicious scoundrel!" continued the orator; "it was only a mean trick after all. There was nothing under heaven the matter with my unmentionables!"

An assemblage of a few friends, one evening, the absence of a lady was noticed, which was apologized for by an acquaintance, who stated that she was detained by "a little incident."

"Ah, yes!" exclaimed Mrs. J. Chatterell, "and a beautiful little incident it was, too—weighs just nine pounds and a half!"

An English country doctor was lecturing a poor tippler for shortening his days with drink. With the most charming simplicity he replied: "Why, I come from Marden, where two doctors drank themselves to death; and surely they'd never took it if it had been bad for them."

The celebrated Whitson, while dining with lady Jekyll, was asked why woman was made out of a rib? "Indeed, my lady," replied he, "I don't know, except it was because the rib is the crookedest part of the body."

A gentleman while walking one Sunday evening, met a young peasant girl, whose parents lived near his house. "What are you doing Jenny?" said he. "I am looking for a son-in-law for my mother," she replied.

Miscellaneous.

Mr. Pepper's Wife.

Mrs. Pepper, I labor under the impression that it is high time that you were getting breakfast. As my former house-keeper understood all my wishes in regard to these things, I found it unnecessary to give my orders respecting them; but with you it is different. As you have never got a meal in this house, of course you know nothing of the regulation of the household.

In the first place, you will make a fire in the kitchen, put on the kettle, &c.; then you will make a fire in here. That being done, you will cook the breakfast and bring it here, as I have always been accustomed to taking mine in bed, and do not consider it necessary to depart from that custom on your account; but should you prefer it, you can eat yours in the kitchen, as it is perfectly immaterial to me.

This occurred the morning after Mrs. Pepper went to housekeeping. Mrs. Pepper was a sensible woman,—she made no reply to Mr. Pepper's commands; but as soon as her toilet was finished, she left the room, and sitting down in the kitchen, she then ruminated:

"Make the kitchen fire! Yes, I'll do that. Then make a fire in the bed-room! I'll see that you have to carry me, for I won't walk!"

Mr. Pepper looked at his wife for a moment with the greatest astonishment; but as she began to laugh at him again, he thought to himself—

"She thinks I won't do it, and hopes to get off in that way; but it won't do; up stairs she's got to go, if I do have to carry her; so here goes," and taking the form of his lady in his arms, he soon had the satisfaction of seeing her safely lodged in her prison, and carefully locking her in, he stationed a little red-headed youth on the front door steps to attend to callers, also see that Mrs. P. did not escape; and then he took himself to a restaurant for his dinner, and dispatching that he hurried off to his office, and was soon engaged in business.

About the middle of the afternoon, our young sentinel rushed into the office, and said, without stopping to take breath: "Sir, Mrs. Pepper is still about the house."

"Sir, Pepper had better run home just as fast as he can, for that woman what's shut up making an awful racket, and she's bearing around there, and rattling things the distressingest kind, and if she beats splitting up something or other, then I don't know what splitting be!"

Without waiting to hear more, Mr. P. seized his hat, and hurried off home at a most ungracious pace.

Opening the hall door, he stole up stairs as carefully as possible, and applying his eyes to the key-hole, he beheld a sight which made him fairly boil with rage.

"Mrs. Pepper was sitting in front of the fire-place, reading his love-letters. The one she was engaged in perusing at that particular moment was from a Miss Polly Primrose, who it appears once looked favorably on the suit of Mr. Pepper; but a more dashing lover appearing on the scene, Miss Polly sent him a letter of dismissal, promising her undying friendship, and accompanying the same with a lock of her hair, and some walnut meats.

But it was not the love-letters alone that Mr. P. was so outraged. He had been something of a traveller in his day, and had collected a great many curiosities in his rambles which he had deposited in a cupboard in the very room where he had confined Mrs. P. and she had got at them.

She had split up an elegant writing desk with his Indian battle-axe, in order to have a fire, as they was rather chilly. In one corner of the fire-place was Mr. P.'s best beaver, filled up with love-letters.

"A cosy little arrangement, Mr. Pepper, said a little voice behind him.

Mr. P. started up, and there stood Mrs. P. right behind his chair, laughing just as hard as she could. Mr. Pepper put on a severe look.

"Sit down in a chair, madam, he said pointing to the one he had just vacated, while I have a little conversation with you.

"Now I should be pleased to know why you did not obey my orders this morning, and where have you been all the forenoon?"

"Where have I been this forenoon, Mr. Pepper, I have not the least objection to tell you; I have been down town doing a little shopping. I have purchased some lovely napkins; just look at them," said she holding them up firmly for his inspection; "I only paid a dollar apiece for them—extremely cheap, don't you think so?" she added.

Mr. Pepper was astonished; how she dared to turn the conversation in this way, was a mystery to him. Suddenly his bottled wrath broke loose. Turning fiercely upon her he said:

"Betsy Jane, you disgust me; you seem to make very light of this matter but it is more serious than you imagine, as you will find to your cost presently. If you do not instantly beg my pardon in a submissive manner, I shall exert my authority to bring you to a proper sense of your misconduct, by imprisoning you in one of my chambers until you are willing to promise strict obedience to my wishes."

At the close of this elo

SOCIAL REUNIONS.—The third of the Hancock Lt. Guards' Assembly will take place at their Armory next Friday night. These parties are certainly the pleasantest we have had the pleasure of looking in upon for a long time. The Guards are whole souled fellows—they have the good will and confidence of the public, and therefore their Armory on "dancing nights" is thronged with brave men and fair maidens. We understand the "old folks" will be present the next night, and of course all the young 'uns, so that all will go as merry as a marriage bell. If you love a good time don't fail to attend.

Foreign Correspondence.

[LETTER ONE.]

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 17th, 1855.

DEAR ALBERT.—I promised to give you some account of my travels in Europe, and therefore please accept the following as the first instalment of the debt. I shall not inflict upon you a sentimental rehearsal of the pains of parting from loved friends, nor a rhapsody on the resplendent beauties of a sunset at sea; neither will I attempt to portray the sublime horrors of an Atlantic storm.

Think not my humour in this perverse.

The simple truth is my pangs were felt the previous Sunday; and as for the rest, I have seen far finer sunsets from the summit of Penn's Hill than it was my lot to witness on the ocean, and when the wind blew almost a gale I was too sick to move or talk, much less to brave the weather without, and enjoy the raging scene.

Excepting some twenty-four hours sail from Halifax, the sea was smooth as a mill-pond from Boston to Liverpool.

Nothing remarkable occurred on the voyage, which, but for the company of two or three friends, the romance of Angus Leigh, and the oddities of a few originals on board, would have been unendurably stupid.

Speaking of originals, there was one who sat at the same table with us, that might sat for the portrait of John Bull, as that respectable personage dwells in the imagination of Brother Jonathan.

His short, fat body was enveloped in a short cloak which gave him the appearance of a turtle erect on his hind legs.

His ignorance of America was only equalled by his prejudice against every thing American.

One day at dinner he gravely informed the Captain (who by the way is a well informed and liberal Scotchman,) that at all the hotels and restaurants in New York which he entered, the bills of fare announced beef, mutton, partridges, etc., imported from England by the last steamer!

Upon another occasion he could not be brought to believe we have any lobsters, salmon or other fish known in this country, and pushed his credulity so far as to provoke the captain to exclaim, "My dear sir, more salmon ascend one American river during the season, than are to be found in all the waters of England, Scotland and Ireland together."

An old Scotch gentleman pronounced him "regular John Bull allad."

This old gentleman assumed an agreeable contrast. He had crossed the ocean many times before, and was quite au fait in all matters pertaining to the sea. He was taking his two daughters to the old country to be educated.

He looked the very picture of a pale, healthy, whole-souled patriarch, as with a daughter on each strong arm, he strode sturdily up and down the deck, every now and then rejoicing his soul and the ears of the company with a sonorous and joyous laugh.

Talking about the nationality of the officers on the Cunard line he remarked, they were chiefly countrymen of his. "Why is that?" I inquired. "Oh, because the owners are not prejudiced; they get the best they can!"

Liverpool is so much like an American city as to create hardly any surprise in the traveller, and consequently affords few objects which would interest you. We could not help feeling as if we had been on an excursion on the water, and had landed in some hitherto unvisited city in the States. This resemblance to our cities is traceable to similarity of history; Liverpool has increased since 1805 from $80,000 to 350,000 inhabitants,—mainly on account of the cotton trade. The houses are principally built of brick, but not the brick with which the eyes of Bostonians are familiar. It is not the custom to paint the houses here, and consequently there is an air of venerability about them which is increased by the mottled appearance of the walls. This peculiarity is owing to the fact that the bricks are of different hues. The churches are numerous, but, with the exception of St. Paul's, and the Unitarian Chapel, they have little pretensions to architectural merit. The last named is a perfect gem in the old English style, with a large school-house attached. The effect of the whole is solemn and beautiful.

The pride of Liverpool is her wonderful docks. The immense shipping of this port entirely within them, so that as you ascend the river a wall of hewn Scotch granite is between you and the forest of masts.

At regular intervals occurs an opening for the ships to pass in and out.

And now my dear A., having only a few scraps of observations left, and feeling too lazy as well as too merciful to give utterance, I must bring this lengthy epistle to a close. To-morrow we stop a few hours at Chester. You shall hear from me again ere I reach the Capital of the World. Yours, &c. B.

SLEIGHING.—For many years, sleighing, the favorite pleasure of New Englanders, has not been in so good an order and with better prospects of its continuance. A very desirable ride from the city, either for parties of pleasure or recreation, than our own town, cannot be found within the vicinity of the city; and the popularity which has been given to other places will be found in part, at least, to have been misplaced, if parties will only, say for novelty and change of scenery, try a new place in these "digging." The landlord of the Hancock House, in this town, is an old carter though young in years, has ample and excellent accommodations for parties and will do the acceptable thing and render the visits of all one of pleasure and satisfaction.

SEALED PROPOSALS will be received at this office until Tuesday, the 15th day of January, 1856, at 12 o'clock, M. for turning out the work required in the execution of the contract for the building of Minot's Ledge, Massachusetts Bay.

The stone to be delivered on the Government wharf, at Gull Island, which is in the Harbor of Cohasset, within a few miles of Minot's Ledge.

The plan of the Light House is circular, the diameter of the base is thirty feet; the distance from the top of the base to the height of the lantern is seven feet four inches. The lower part is solid for the first forty feet; the average thickness of the wall above the solid portion is three feet three inches; the rise of each course is two feet.

This stone must be delivered in the order in which they are to be laid in the work; that is to say, all stones for the first entire course must be delivered in advance of those of the second, and those of the second course in advance of those of the third, and so on in order for all the courses.

They are to be delivered under the direction of the Superintendent of the work, and the United States will not be responsible for any of them unless they have been so delivered.

Each contractor is requested to send with his bid a fair specimen of stone which he proposes to use, and to be accompanied by particular information as to its locality and capacity of the quarry.

Each bid must be accompanied by the guarantee of some responsible person that the bidder is able to comply with the terms of his bid.

Eights per cent of the value of all the completed courses of stone may be delivered during each month, and at the close of the month, and the remainder twenty per cent will be paid when the contract is completed.

The Old and the New Year.

Old year, farewell ! It grieves my heart
To feel the change so soon must part,
And with the gloomy scenes of earth,
Where sorrow weeps or cheerful mirth
Engaged the hour, I've walked with thee,
And shared thy blessed sympathy.

At home, abroad; with friends now found,
Or those to whom I've long been bound,
I've travelled side by side with thee,
And how to part is grief to me.

Farewell ! thou goest to yield thy place
To one who comes with smiling face,
And many promises to be
A better friend than thou to me ;
To bear me onward to the goal

With lighter step and happier soul.
Well doth he promise ; but to win
A crown of life, and free from sin,
The resting place of saints secure,

Oh ! who but Christ can make that sure ?

Then to His cross, in-coming year,
Let every moment bear me near,
And nearer still ; thus will thou be
The friend who promises to me,
Farewell, Old Year ! we shall meet
In market thronged or crowded street ;
But we shall meet before the throne,
Where all the deeds mankind have done,
Proclaimed and judged, shall find award
From Christ, the omniscient living Lord

New Year ! thy proffered hand I take,
With thee my pilgrimage to make,
Or, ere thy hasty months be fled,
Perchance to slumber with the dead.
Whate'er my future lot may be,
Which can not reveal to me, to Cheerful I yield my destiny.
May he my footsteps here attend,
And crown me at my journey's end.

Infant Beauty.

Bright be the skies that cover thee,
Child of the sunny bower—
Bright as the dream flings over thee
Ay all that meets thee now,
Thy heart is beating joyously,
Thy voice is like a bird's,
And sweetly breaks the melody
Of thy imperfect words.

I know not if such gushes out
So gladly thy tiny shout.

I would that thou mightst ever be
As beautiful as now—

That time might ever leave us
They yet unwritten bower—

I would life were "all poetry,"
To gentle measure set ;

That though but chaste melody
Might stain thine eye of jet,

Nor discordant note be spoken,
Till God the cunning harp hath broken.

The Tear.

On beds of snow the moonbeam slept,
And chilly was the midnight gloom,
When by the damp grave Ellen wpt—
Fond maid ! it was her Lindor's tomb !

A warm tear gush'd, the wintry air
Congeal'd it as it flow'd away ;
All night it lay an ice-drop there,
At morn it glitter'd in the ray.

An angel w'd ring from her sphere,
Who say this bright, this frozen gem,
To dewy'd Pitt brought by the tear,
And hung it on her diadem !

The Winter's Morn.

Artist unseen ! that, dipp'd in frozen dew,
Hast on the glittering glass thy pencil laid.
Ere from you sun the transient visions fade,
Swift let me trace the forms thy fancy drew !

Thy towers and palaces of diamond hue,
Rivers and lakes of lucid crystal made,

And hung in air trees of branching shade,
Those liquid pearl distil, thy scenes renew,

What art of bower of roses, what art of secret groves underneath the earth,

Where nereids roost with sport the amber cave,

Or bowers of blue, where sport the fairy train,

Who, frequent by the moonlight wandered seen,

Circle with radiant gems the dewy green.

Anecdotes.

Disobedient children, if preserved from the gallows, are reserved for the rack, to be tortured by their own posterity. One complaining, that never father had so undutiful a son as he had : "Yes," said his son, with less grace than truth, "my grandmother had."

"Shon," said a Dutchman, "you may say what you please, 'bout bad neighbors ; I has to worst neighbors as never was. Mine pigs and mine hens come home mit der ears split, and toder day two of dem come home missin'."

Suspicious tailor to a suspected customer, "Make you a coat, sir ? Oh, yes, sir, with greatest pleasure. There, just stand in that position, please, and look right upon that sign, while I take your measure." Sign reads, "Terms Cash."

A gentleman meeting a very homely man, thus addressed him : "My dear friend, you ought to take saffron constantly." For what ? inquired the latter, "To keep the ugliness out, for if it ever strikes in it will surely kill you."

"I tell you," said a friend of a newly elected Senator, to an old sober politician, "your party may say what they please, but cannot deny that Mr. C—— is a sound man."

"That's just what we are afraid on," replied old beeswax ; "it's our opinion that he's all sound!"

"Your stairs are very dark ; do you think I can find the bottom ? Nothing easier, my dear madam ; all you have to do is to let go the balusters and make a tumble."

A lawyer, being sick, made his last will and testament, and gave all his estates to fools and madmen ! Being asked the reason for so doing, he said, "From such I got it, and to such I return it again."

How to build a House.

CHAPTER ONE.

I tell you, my dear, it is utterly impossible! Save three hundred a year out of my salary? You don't understand it, said Charles to his young wife.

"Perhaps I do not," replied Mrs. Converse, "but my opinion is very decided."

"Women don't understand these things." "I think my salary of eight hundred dollars a year a fortune."

"No such thing, Charles."

"But eight hundred dollars, let me tell you, won't buy all the world."

"I have no idea that it would; yet if you only had the habit of saving what you spend for things that you can get along without, you would be able to build a house in a few years."

"Build a house?"

"Yes, build a house, Charles."

"Well, that's a good one!"

The young man laughed heartily at the idea—too chimerical, too absurd to be harbored for a moment.

"How much do you suppose it really costs us to live last year?"

"Why, eight hundred dollars of course. It took all my salary—there is none of it left."

The young wife smiled mischievously, as she took from her work-table a small account book.

"You did not know that I kept account of all these things, did you?"

"No; but how much was it?" and Charles was a little disturbed by the cool way in which his wife proceeded to argue the question.

"Four hundred and ninety-two dollars," answered Mrs. Converse.

"Oh, but my dear, have you got half of it down. Your figures can't be correct, Mary," said he.

"Why not?"

"My salary is used up, and you can account for only four hundred and ninety-two dollars of it."

"You must explain the balance."

"I! Why, Mary, I have not been extravagant. It is true I buy a great many little things in the course of a year; but they are hardly worth the mention."

"Ah! there's the mischief. That is where the money goes to, you may depend upon it."

"Nonsense," you women don't understand these things."

"Of course we don't!"

"Well, your figures show that you don't. Where have the three hundred dollars gone to then?"

"I don't know, Charley. I haven't the least idea. I am sure that I have got down all the items that come within my knowledge. I am positive that you brought home no article or purchase, and a dozen big ones, too, for that matter. Against the latter he resolutely set his face, though, in consideration of the fact that his salary would be a thousand dollars a year after the next pay day, he had a week before made up his mind to have them.

Among other things, his cigar-case was empty, and he stepped into Seavy's in Congress street, to have it replenished. Cigars were a luxury—in fact, a necessity to him, in his opinion.

"Something new," said he.

"Best cigars in the market," continued the vendor.

"Tip-top," replied Charles, inhaling the grateful odor. "How do you sell them?"

"Four cents apiece."

Six of them were transferred to the case, a quarter thrown down, and, as it was not magnanimous to pick up a copper's change,

"It will be a long while," laughed the husband.

"Five or six years perhaps if you are prudent." Hasn't the President of your bank promised you a thousand dollars next year?"

"Yes."

"Then you can certainly save four hundred dollars a year."

The "fire escape" is one of the peculiar institutions of London. The Royal Society for the protection of life from fire have established stations in all parts of the city, where fire escapes and experienced men to use them may be found at all hours of the night. The fire escape which is most used consists of a high ladder, beneath which, extending along the whole length is a canvas trough or bag, protected from the flames by a close net of copper wire. Into the head of this bag the terrified inmates of an upper story are thrust in time of danger, and slide down the bulging canvas to the ground without injury.—Boston Journal.

School House Dedication.

In the last number of the Dorchester Mercury, we find an interesting account of the building and dedication of the new school house at Neponset. From it we learn that the cost of the edifice is about $8,000, and will accommodate the Neponset and Port Norfolk schools. Its architectural appearance is very beautiful and attractive, and the workmanship excellent, and the whole arrangement creditable to the town of Dorchester and to the committees who have had the building in charge. Dorchester has been highly favored in her school affairs, and particularly in being able to find competent men who have been willing to devote their time and abilities to the service of the town in that particular sphere. We will at the present time merely allude to the names of Hall, Smith, Robinson and Swan, while we pass to that of our worthy friend and co-laborer, editorially, Dr. O. Putnam Bacon, the zealous, earnest, hard-working Secretary of the Board of School Committee. For years, we know no how many, he has labored for his fellow-citizens in this capacity. No discouragement can dishearten him, no labor exhaust him; no difficulties daunt him. Energetic, persevering, and devoted, he commands the respect and confidence of the people, while his uniform kindness, urbanity, and thoughtfulness, attract the affection of teachers and pupils and originate an attachment that will be more enduring than life itself. We repeat it, but few towns are so signal fortunate; and happy will it be for Dorchester if, when time lays his hand heavily upon him—which we trust will not be speedily—and the cares and duties of his place are a burden, not through any failing of the spirit, but through the weakness of the mortal which visitation God grant may not be near, she can find one who will so truly unite the kindness of a parent with the unwavering justice of a Committee, in his intercourse with the children, the courtesy of a true friend with the often severe sternness and honest criticism belonging to his official capacity, in his relation to the Teachers, and the unflinching fidelity in the discharge of the duties entrusted to one of the School Committee by the inhabitants of the town.

FERRY COMPANY. The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Quincy Point and Germantown Ferry Company, was held on last Monday week, when the following gentlemen were elected Directors for the ensuing year:—George Baxter, Hiram Prior, Obadiah Allen, Foster Brown, Naaman B. Holmes.

Samuel Higgins, was elected Clerk.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors, George Baxter was chosen President and Hiram Prior Treasurer.

CHEAP GROCERIES, ETC. Attention is directed to the advertisements of H. Vinal of this town, at whose Store, opposite the Orthodox Meeting-house, may be found the usual variety of Groceries, Flour, Provisions, etc., which we are informed he is selling at very low prices, especially Flour; and buyers of articles in his line of business will perhaps find it to their interest to give him a call.

COUNSEL. But few of our reading public are aware how continually an editor is called upon to advise his patrons on every subject, from politics to the breed of cattle. Through the whole range of our duties none has perplexed me more than to tell our readers what to take for a cure when they are sick. Hitherto this has been a severe trial to all our skill, but it will not be hereafter. We have been taking, and have seen the evidence from others that have taken Doct. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and Cathartic Pills. They need but slight trial to convince the most sceptical how far they are superior to other medicines we have had in use. They have one single property of great importance to the sick and that is they cure.—Boston Herald

LADY'S ALMANAC. This popular calendar has been received from J. P. Jewell & Co., of Boston, at whose extensive publishing houses the Boston Almanac is also issued, a copy of which has failed to reach us. Both of the works are of worth and no family should be without a copy of one of them.

Quincy Point.

Among the improvements required and which will soon come before the town for consideration, is a project for the continuation of Liberty street to the Point on the Quincy and Hingham Turnpike Corporation, whereby a road of descending grade would be established from Willard's Ledge to Quincy Point. This would not be an expensive undertaking, and yet would be highly conducive to several important interests of the town. A part of the road is already laid out on the Edward's plain, at the easterly extremity of the proposed road. The distance saved and the hills avoided by our stone teams would be so material as to justify us in recommending the construction of the road as a work of public utility and almost necessity.

The advantages for the transhipment of stone from the Point are undeniable and need only be alluded to. For many years it has been an object dear to some of our citizens of public spirit, to increase and cheapen the facilities for the transportation of stone from the quarries to the wharves at the Quincy Point. The contemplated road when completed would effect this object in a great measure. It would not be difficult for the stone wagons to reach the road from any of the quarries in town. The road could be made hard and durable at small cost.

Then again, we are not without hope that we shall some day, not remote, see iron tracks of a railroad from Willard's Ledge to Quincy Point, over which cars drawn by horses or engines shall pass. Such a road would serve for the transportation of stone and if need be passengers—and thus that thriving and growing part of Quincy—the Point, now without convenient modes of going to and from the centre of the town and also the city of Boston, be greatly benefited thereby. This is a feasible plan we believe—and one of real practical and useful character, and we would bespeak for it the attention and respectful consideration of our people. Quincy must avail herself of her great natural advantages; and old Fogeyism, that like a nightmare has for so long sat upon her energies must be discarded and a new order of things instituted.

LETTER TWO.

WARRICK, Dec. 18, 1855.

DEAR ALBERT:—We left Liverpool this morning, intending to proceed to Oxford, (though not immediately) by way of Chester, Birmingham, and Warwick. And here mark my mistake; so that you may not be liable to commit the same error, should your wanderings ever lead you to these regions. Supposing Warwick was nearer Liverpool than Birmingham, I purchased tickets to the former place, and thus missed one opportunity of seeing a great centre of English manufacturing. We had especial reason to regret this mismanagement, because some thirteen miles from Birmingham a gentleman entered our coach, with whom I speedily entered into a conversation, during which he learnt we were Americans, gave his card, and offered to show us the wonders of Birmingham manufactures. This is but one instance out of many where we have been treated with marked politeness by Englishmen, so commonly, on our side of the water, pronounced cold and distant.

But to return to our "day's march." A ferry-boat from the Liverpool quay landed us in a few moments, at Birkenhead on the opposite side of the Mersey,—a muddy stream of which Mrs. Stowe is said to have remarked, "The quality of mercy is not strained!" The ferry-boats which we saw, by the way, are inferior in general appearance and comfort to those which ply about Boston and New York. They are not half the size, are pointed at either end, and are cast off, as well as brought to a landing, with degrees of clumsiness and delay that would bring a profane ejaculation from a Brooklyn man in haste to arrive in Wall street. Perhaps the height to which the tides rise (from twelve to thirty feet,) may account for their pointed bows, which unfit them from running into a receding dock with safety and despatch.

The first thing in Birkenhead that attracted my notice, was the peculiar form of the cars, (coaches they term them) which present the appearance of a number of stages of the olden times welded together, one behind another. Each coach will accommodate six or seven persons, there being four or five of them to each set of wheels. My eye was caught by an interest of great importance as a means of saving life and adding to the comfort of traveling. It was this: parallel with the coupling of every two sets of coaches, or every two cars, as we would say, there projected four buff-breaks (two on one side, and two on the other,) consisting each of a metal rod terminating in a circular piece about the size of a dinner plate, and this faced with elastic padding. As the rod plays upon a powerful spiral spring, serious results from collisions are rendered much less probable than with us. The simplicity of these breaks should secure their adoption on our roads. I could not help being struck with the great care that is used in this country to prevent the occurrence of accidents. As another example, take the law which compels rail road companies to lay their track either over or under the usual thoroughfares. This morning a ride of twenty minutes, I counted four teen neat brick and stone bridges over-arching the railway.

But all this while we are not advancing very rapidly in the "day's march". In half an hour we were in the modern station (some what architectural) in, or rather near, the ancient town of Chester. There are few, if any, places in Great Britain with authentic pretensions to such high antiquity as this quaint old town. The ancient portion is surrounded by unbroken wall of red sand-stone, 1.34 miles in length. On the top of the wall is a pleasant promenade broad enough for two persons to walk abreast. We inquired the way to it of an English gentleman who kindly turned aside to lead us to it, and impart some interesting information. After walking a quarter of a mile we came upon a picturesque round tower, situated at an angle of the wall. Upon its face, near the top, was this inscription: "King Charles stood on this tower, Sept. 24, 1644, and saw his army defeated on Rowton Moor". He subsequently fled to Oxford; you know his fate. In height, massiveness, and picturesqueness, the wall and tower fully answered the expectations we had formed. A few minutes more brought us to the Cathedral. Seen from a distance, it looked smaller than we had anticipated, and there was a feeling of coming disappointment.

But as we neared the venerable pile, wing crept from behind wing, and angle from behind angle, till the eye was filled with seeing, and yet new points of interest opened to our view at every step. The material being a friable sand-stone, much of the finer work has perished,—a loss hardly to be regretted, as there is added charm in the rugged time-beaten walls. But I must hasten on. Night has intervened since the last page was written, and Warwick and Kenilworth claim the morning hours.

In the Cathedral at Chester, we placed ourselves under the guidance of the sexton, who manifested intimate acquaintance with the treasures of which he has charge, as well as a kindly appreciation of them. The interior shall leave unattempted. Suffice it to say, it surprised all my previous experience of Gothic architecture. We were shown the following objects of interest: The Genealogy of Jesus, carved in oak at the head of a pew; the seats upon which the old monks sat as they chanted; the supposed tomb of the east Henry, Emperor of Germany; a Chapel where Protestants (including a martyr burnt at Chester) were tried under bloody Mary; a tapestry representation of Elynus the sorcerer, struck blind in the presence of St. Paul; a subterraneous passage for Nuns; and, to come down to more recent times, the banners of the Chester regiment, which fought at Bunker Hill. The sexton pointed them out with a delicacy that could not have offended the most sensitive American. He was surprised to learn that the English forces were finally victorious in that battle-field. The date of the oldest part of the Cathedral, is A. D. 1069. About ten years ago it was refitted with stained windows, representing the life of Christ, and now daily morning and evening services are held there. Adieu.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, Jan. 12th, 1856.

To the Editor of the Quincy Patriot:

The Legislature is going on quite smoothly. The opposition forces are just large enough to keep the Know Nothings in order and no one need expect such rich scenes as were witnessed in the last House.

Let Federal croakers, who are so anxious to shift the responsibility of this waste of the public time, from their own shoulders, to that of others, remember that the different factions which they have thrown into the House, were sent there, not for the purpose of attending to the duties of legislation, but to form the nucleus of a party for the approaching Presidential election. We hope, the people will allow them a few weeks longer, in this interesting labor, if only to see what kind of bunting they would be likely to give birth to.

FATAL ACCIDENT. An interesting child of Mr. John Mahony, of this town, about four years of age, was drowned in the brook where Canal street crosses, on Wednesday last. He was absent from his parents but a few minutes, when the intelligence reached them that he had fallen into an aperture and had passed under the ice. Immediate efforts were made to save him, and although the stream is rather shallow at this place, he was not found until fifteen minutes' expiration, when life was thought to be extinct.

REPRINT. We have republished a story on our first page, which appeared a few weeks back, by request; the merits of the article being considered of sufficient interest and value to justify such a course.

OUR PAPER. The paper upon which we print to day is not so good a quality by any means as we intend to furnish, but the weather, etc., has so far operated on all arrangements, that we are obliged to put up with the best we can find, and shall remedy the evil as soon as possible. Our patrons must forbear.

CLAM CHOWDER. This desirable luxury will be served, in the usual and acceptable style of the proprietor of the Granite Saloon, this afternoon and evening, to the multitude of admirers who like the preparation done up in the excellent manner which distinguishes this favorite place.

THE WEATHER for the last few days has been remarkably pleasant. The snow begins to show signs of a January thaw.

Quincy Point.

Railroads; as they now tax Banks—such a tax however would be nothing less than a tax upon the passengers over the roads—and why should passengers constituting but a part of the whole people be taxed to pay for the expenses of the whole?

The Governor is against the further increase of Bank capital and also against the further loan of the State credit.

The Governor very wisely omits to make a splash on national matters—so common to Governors.

On the whole it appears that we have got a very respectable State-administration. Let them repudiate their extreme notions about Americanism—modify or repeal the Liquor law—repeal the Personal Liberty Bill—attend to their State duties—repeal some of the acts of the last legislature—and carry out the suggestions of the Governor's message on state debt, banks, railroad and other corporations, lobbying, reserving fund to redeem small bills of exploded Banks, etc., and it will become entitled to respect and gratitude.

Poetry.

A Promise.

When I am a spirit, with wings as free
As the pinions borne by the viseless air;
In the twilight time I will come to thee,
And count it a blessing to linger there.

And if thou shouldest feel, at that silent hour,
A whispered breath on thy spirit's shrine,
Oh, yield thy thoughts to its mystic power,
And know that my soul communes with thine.

And I would that the boon were granted now,
That magic beauty to linger nigh,
To fan the locks from that stainless brow,
Or quaff the light of that glorious eye.

For I know that within is a fountain deep,
The gleam of whose waves had birth on high,
Where the mirror'd in quiet and beauty, sleep
The stately things of the holy sky.

Yet I would not come in my robes of clay,
As being a being to thee unknown,
I will wait till my spirit hath worn away
The grosser garb that is round it shuns;

And then, when the balm of the world hath died,
On a summer's eve, from thy weary ear,
With a song of the skies I will seek thy side,
And count it a blessing to linger there.

And the hour is near, for my eager heart
Is beating a way through the temple frail,
Where it soon shall bid my soul depart
From the fetters it wore in this lowly vale.

And the voiceless strains that within me slept,
That would not breathe in this tainted air;
The harp that no human hands have swept,
Shall wake in a burst of music there.

And thus I will come with pinions free,
When the world's balm dies on thy weeping ear,
In the twilight time, to seek from thee
The union of feeling denied me here.

The Merry Heart.

'Tis well to have a merry heart,
However short we stay;
There's widoon in a merry heart,
What'er the world may say.
Philosophy may lift his head
And find out many a flaw,
But give me the philosopher
That's happy with a straw.

If life but brings us happiness,
It brings us, we are told,
What's hard to buy, though rich ones try
With all the heaps of gold;
Then laugh away, let others say
What'er they will of mirth,
Who laughs the most may truly boast
He's got the wealth of earth.

There's beauty in the merry heart,
A moral beauty, too;
It shows the heart's an honest heart,
That's paid each man his due;
And lend a share of what's to spare,
Desire of wisdom's fears,
And makes the cheek less sorrow speak,
The eye weep fewer tears.

The sun may shroud itself in cloud,
The tempest wrath begin;
It finds a spark to cheer the dark,
Its sunlight is within;
Then laugh away, let others say
What'er they will of mirth;
Who laughs the most may truly boast

Native Land.

The wandering mariner, whose eye explores
The wealthiest isles, the most enchanting shores,
Views not a realm so beautiful and fair,
Nor breathes the fragrance of a purer air;
In every clime the magnet of the soul,
Touch'd by remembrance, trembles to that pole.

On Matrimony.

Tom praised his friend, who changed his state,
For binding fast himself and Kate
In unison divine;
• Wedlock's the end of life," he cried;
"Too true, alack!" said Jack, and sighed,
"Twill be the end of mine."

Children Entering Heaven.

Who are they whose little feet,
Pacing life's dark journey through,
Now they've reached that Heavenly seat?
They had ever kept in view;
"I from Greenland's frozen land,"
"I from India's sultry plain,"
"I from Africa's barren sand,"
"I from islands of the main."
All our earthly journey past,
Every tear and pain gone by,
Here together met at last
At the portals of the sky;
Each the welcome "Come" awaits,
Conquerors over death and sin?"
Lift your hands, ye golden gates,
Let the little travellers in.

Anecdotes.

A dentist having labored in vain to extract a decayed tooth from a lady's mouth, gave up the task with this felicitous apology:—
"The fact is, madam, it is impossible for anything bad to come from your mouth."

"Do you mean to challenge the jury?" whispered a lawyer to his Irish client in California.
"Yes, if they don't acquit me I mean to challenge every one of 'em."

"I didn't like our minister's sermon last Sunday," said a deacon who had slept all sermon time, to a brother deacon. "Didn't like it, brother A.?" Why, I saw you nodding assent to every proposition of the parson."

"Mr. Jones, you said you were connected with the fine arts. Do you mean by that that you are a sculptor?"

"No, sir, I don't sculpt myself, but I furnish the stone to the men what does."

"I don't wish to say anything against the person in question," said a very polite gentleman, "but I would merely remark in the language of the poet, that to him truth is strange, stranger than fiction."

LETTER THREE.

WARRICK, Dec 20, 1855.

DEAR ALBERT:—As we waded down this morning towards Warwick Castle, we obtained another view of the little gem of a chapel on the east gate, a remnant of the old wall of fortification which once surrounded the whole town. A chapel on a wall! The idea of such a location for a place of worship never entered my head. After seeing this example, a new light broke in upon the meaning of the passage where St. Paul tells of his being let down, for fear of the Jews in a basket, from the window of a house on the wall. The thickness of the ancient wall of Warwick would surprise you; I stepped off the distance through the gate-way, under the chapel, and found it to be seventeen good paces. Perhaps the gate-way as the usual point of attack was generally built deeper and stronger than the house. The chapel is now used for accommodating a charity school of seventeen or eighteen boys.

The opposite entrance, known by the names of West Gate and Leicester's Hospital, supports the house and place of worship of twelve veterans, who have been wounded in the service of their country. They are presented with these comfortable quarters by twelve neighboring parishes, one from each. A clergyman of the Church of England, with a moderate salary and the title of master, attends to the spiritual welfare of the inmates, and reads prayers for them twice a day. On Sundays and holydays they attend St. Mary's. These buildings were appropriated by Robert Dudley, the Earl of Leicester, who entertained Queen Bess seventeen days, and formed it into a hospital, as some slight explanation for his mantled villanies. In the old kitchen and dining-hall we read an inscription to the effect that James I. had there been right royally feasted by the corporation, yea, farther than that into pre Adamite periods, when the gigantic elk wandered at will over the green vales of the Emerald Isle and dying, left his noble antlers to the safe-keeping of the Peat bog, from which yonder pair were disinterred. There was a table inlaid with the most splendid marbles of Italy, whose actual cost was $50,000, and its value as a work of art double that amount. Another was composed of the melted matter at various periods thrown out from the crater of Aetna. Paintings innumerable, by Paul Veronese, Caracci, Salvator Rosa, Vandyke, Rubens and Raphael, adorned the walls. But this dry catalogue conveys more of the enjoyment imparted by the original objects.

morning down his capacious throat, but confidently assured of her dissent from the common opinion, and advanced the more probable one that it contained the porridge of Guy and his large garrison of soldiers. This old warrior, who lived in the time of Prince Arthur, was a sort of local Hercules, engaged in performing prodigies of valor upon man and wild beast, and ridding the country of scourges.

Leaving the Lodge we entered upon a road cut out of the solid rock to the depth of 20 or 30 feet, the sides of which are covered with clustering vines. Much to my relief we were joined by a lady and gentleman from London, the latter an artist, as he soon suffered to leak out. I say much to my relief, because it is disagreeable to be compelled to say yes, oh, oh, indeed! ad infinitum et ad nauseam to the garrulous guide who shall "Bow you through donjan-keep and hall for three and sixpence sterling." The artist and the footman, who exhibited the curiosities, took care of each other whilst we weekly received the droppings of their wisdom. The view from the last turn of the road, as it emerges to a level with the lawn, is grand, beautiful and imposing beyond the feeble utterance of my tongue or pen,—aye, beyond the excellent print which your eyes shall behold. To the left, Calais Tower, the oldest, most irregular and picturesque portion of the Castle; to the right Guy's Tower, from its position on a rock overlooking the whole structure and country around, in the centre a Gothic gate-way with towers and painted windows far above it; the grey walls mantled with ivy; all formed a picture that must be seen to be conceived, and conceived to be felt. It was a visible, tangible embodiment of my floating notions of a baronial abode in the old days of chivalry and romance. Had Sir Walter himself appeared and courteously offered to unveil the mysteries of the place, and hang a tragedy on every pinnacle, I should not have been much surprised. Under the arch we passed, terrible with iron portcullis and apertures for melted lead, and loop-holes for the discharge of arrows and musketry, and into the open court yard. And lest I weary you we must on into the Great Hall, and other rooms open to strangers, where there are innumerable relics of antiquity; extending as far back as the times of Roman occupation, yea, farther than that into pre Adamite periods, when the gigantic elk wandered at will over the green vales of the Emerald Isle and dying, left his noble antlers to the safe-keeping of the Peat bog, from which yonder pair were disinterred. There was a table inlaid with the most splendid marbles of Italy, whose actual cost was $50,000, and its value as a work of art double that amount. Another was composed of the melted matter at various periods thrown out from the crater of Aetna. Paintings innumerable, by Paul Veronese, Caracci, Salvator Rosa, Vandyke, Rubens and Raphael, adorned the walls. But this dry catalogue conveys more of the enjoyment imparted by the original objects.

Adieu. Yours, B.

Minnesota Correspondence.

WINONA, Dec. 21, 1855.

FRIEND GREEN:—

Your valuable number of Dec. 1st, reached this point yesterday, and was read with more than usual pleasure, for we have been deprived of it for some time on account of the floating ice which has made the "Father of Waters" impassable for some time. Snow is now about a foot deep and we are having capital sleighing—the weather is cold and reliable.

I read your paper with pleasure, as I always do anything from that time honored town, land of my birth—land of sweet memories, and many distinguished relatives.

I was more than pleased at your answer to Ed. Bacon of Dorchester, in his boasting of men and things in that town and could not refrain from a "right smart" laugh at the way you pummeled him.

Quincy is adding new laurels to her already great fame. Capt. Thomas we read is advancing the great enterprise of building ships, and others are about to follow suit at that delightful part of the town, "the Point."

Go on, gentlemen, the West will supply you with freight. You will be judged not only as men of enterprise, but charity dealers for the starving millions of the Old World. May the "Red Jacket" be but the forerunner of a class of vessels of which the King Philip shall be first to add glory and honor to Quincy.

The West is a great country, I can assure you. It eclipses all that I ever imagined of it. It now seems to me a great mystery that these rich and boundless agricultural lands should be overlooked so long. Why it was that such intelligent men that compose the crowded cities and towns of the east, that have lived from hand to mouth as it were so long a time, have not found that with one half of the labor they perform there would here make them independent.

Twenty years from now America will be considered in the valley of the Mississippi. This mighty river that now so gaily guides by within a short distance of where your humble correspondent is now writing.

When one considers the value of this immense fertile valley to our country and the whole world, he is lost in the thoughts of the all-wise Providence and the future destiny of the world, * orso in my world not find it worth while to abuse him? A man without an enemy passes through life a mere zero, unnoticed among the vulgar herd.'

'Just like me,' sighed Bonneau.

'I know I have reproved you a thousand times for your excessive kind-heartedness,' said his friend; but now I have something else to think of. This evening a new comedy of mine is to be acted at the Theatre Francaise; and I have only just received my author's free tickets. I have no time to distribute them, and must trust to you to do so judiciously. Mind that you send me an efficient set of applauders.'

'Very well,' replied Bonneau, taking the tickets and placing them on his desk.

'After all,' mused our hero, when he was left alone, 'why should I have enemies as well as other people?' They might do me more good than my friends; and, at all events, I'll try to make some, by way of experiment. I will just begin with the first person I meet, Francois.'

'What does monsieur please to want?' 'Francois. I'm going to turn you off.'

'Monsieur will turn me off!' cried Francois, astounded.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 26th, 1856.

Braintree Neck.

For several years attempts have been made to vainly induce the legislature to set off to Quincy, that part of Braintree, called Braintree Neck. We learn that efforts are renewed, and that the present Legislature have ordered notice to be served on the town of Quincy to appear, if need be, and show cause why the prayer of the petitioners should not be granted. For ourselves we perceive no good reason why the prayer should not be granted. We cannot perceive any force or reason in the objections to the prayer of the Petitioners, which have come to our knowledge. There is but one tie of any strength which binds the people of the Neck to the town of Braintree, and that is, a new road built at considerable expense running from the Neck to Braintree centre. This we learn is a weighty objection with some of the good people of Braintree. The road was built for the accommodation of the people of the Neck, and now that it is completed, it is said, they ought to stand by the town and contribute to the payment of the expenses of building the road.

If the town of Braintree built a road that was unnecessary, and not required by the wants and interests of the town, but merely for the accommodation of a few individuals who were obliged to go over to Braintree Centre on election days, or any other public occasions, why the town did not act very wisely. But is it so? Will that road be of no accommodation or interest, or both to the town of Braintree, after the annexation of the Neck to the town of Quincy? Will it be necessary to close up the road after that annexation? Not at all. The road is demanded by the interests of the town of Braintree. There is and always will be considerable travel over the road, and to such an extent as will make it a matter of great interest to maintain it, and keep it in good repair. Besides, how trifling is such an objection,—how unworthy of consideration, when taken in connection with the many positive advantages to be derived to the inhabitants of the Neck, who are chiefly interested in this question, by the contemplated annexation? What are a few hundred dollars in such a matter?

Then there are some who have a reverence for the ancient town of Braintree, and are much grieved to see her shorn of her territory. Quincy has been set off from it, and so has Randolph, and if we give up the Neck, it is said, in a year or two the people of East Braintree will be moved to petition the legislature to be set off to Weymouth Landing—so in a few years we shall be reduced to the two little villages of North and South Braintree! And pray what of it? Your taxes will not be increased—nor will your schools be injured. The expense incurred for the support of roads and schools in the sparsely settled portions of the town are fully equal to the income from taxes, real and personal derived from those quarters.—The town of Braintree would then enclose one of the ancient settlements. We of Quincy have long been of the opinion that the most historically interesting part of ancient Braintree is now included within the presents of the town of Quincy, and that the people of the Neck are right in wishing to reunite with the people of Quincy in their municipal rights and privileges, with whom they are intimately and extensively connected by business and social relations.

We shall allude to the advantages to the town of Quincy and the inhabitants at the Neck, in our next number.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES. Nature has now put on her winter over-coat, and mankind (and womankind) generally appear to be following suit, and to be particularly well suited. Sleigh bells and merry voices jingling without jangling, new whips and bright eyes snapping without snarling, and even the horses appear to appreciate the joyousness of the scene and to prance with becoming pride. Occasional turn-overs are matters of course, and as they are not often accompanied by injuries, appear to add to the hilarity, probably on the principle that "variety is charming." To our neighboring out-of-towners we would hint gently, that the sleighing in this vicinity is charming, and that friend Sandy of the Hancock House, is ready and willing to minister to the comfort of the inner man in the most satisfactory manner. A stopping place is necessary, so we advise all you excursionists when you reach Hancock to "hold your horses" and let them rest a little, while you learn from experience, the good things that are always in store.

CROWDED OUT.—C., our Boston correspondent has been unavoidably crowded out. It will appear next week.

The communication of "Quint" was not received in season for this week's paper; it will appear in our next. We would bespeak the attention of our readers to the article, they will be richly repaid for their labor, as it is a very interesting description of Professor C. C. Felton's lecture before the Lyceum.

APPOINTMENTS.—At a meeting of the Board of School Committee, of Dorchester, on the 9th instant, Mr. Lemuel C. Grosvenor, of South Hingham, was unanimously elected Principal of the Mattler Grammar School in the place of Mr. B. F. Brown removed, and Mr. P. B. Merritt of Hingham, was unanimously elected Principal of the New Washington School, in place of Mr. James Sumner, declined serving.—Dorchester Mercury.

maker, but longed in vain;—the Dr., was not in town. So on we went to St. Mary's Church, where we heard a powerful and truly general sermon from a Rev. Mr. Barrow. The speaker moved neither hand nor foot, but spun out his thoughts in one unbroken strain, and yet there was the eloquence of ideas; which made amends for all. His just praise of Simon Wesley, and the Methodist was quite refreshing.

When we entered the Church a guide presented his claims to our notice, and when service was over, conducted us from college to college, and thus gave five or six of his brethren a chance to extract a shilling a piece from our pockets. The interior of the buildings are in better preservation than the exterior, and retain in undimmed glory the beautiful carving, chiseling, and painting of an age highly called dark, but which was richer in some branches of Art than any that preceded or followed it. There were, however, four things in Oxford, which interested me more than all her Colleges and Libraries. 1. The pulpit in the angle of a building from which Crammer preached to the people in the court yard below; 2. The hall where he and several others had a dispute with Romish Divines before Queen Mary's pre-judging commissioners; 3. The simple cross set into the pavement where, Latimer and Ridley were burnt, and the handsome Martyr's memorial which a tardy piety has erected. The following is the inscription upon the Memorial: "To the glory of God, and in grateful commemoration of his servants, Thomas Crammer, —— Ridley, and Hugh Latimer, Prelates of the Church of England, who near this spot yielded their bodies to be burned, bearing witness to the sacred truth which they had affirmed, and maintained against the errors of the Church of Rome; and rejoicing that to them it was given, not only to believe in Christ, but also to suffer for his sake: this monument was erected by public subscription." I omit the date because it was indistinct, and I do not wish to give an incorrect one. It was put up about ten or twelve years ago.

We left Oxford, regretting the coldness of the weather which made sight-seeing in stone buildings a torture, and purposing to return to view it greater advantage in spring.

Our ride to London, owing to a needless detention, was miserably dreary and uncomfortable. Arrived in the monster city with some difficulty, I procured an open cab of the order known as Hanson's Safety Patent. It is swung very low, thus giving an easy step to a lady, and is open in front excepting (in good weather) two shutters, which you pull together after you have taken your seat; and when it rains, you can still further protect yourself by certain glass windows. The cab man occupies a sort of armchair at the back, where he sits quite elevated, and drives over the top of the machine which makes a most ridiculous figure. But then, if you wish to look about you, there is nothing that answers so well. And what was my first impression of London? You may ask. That it is a large, ugly, dirty, lumbering old prostrated Babel, enveloped in a dingy winding-sheet of fog and smoke. We left a beautiful clear sky, and a bright sun five miles behind us, and here we are, where that glorious luminary appears absolutely ridiculous. The Moon of dear old Quincy is a thousand times as beautiful as this London Sun. And yet an English gentleman assured me that he had not yet seen a London fog! He says it has a peculiar yellowish tint, like soap-suds!

Our absurd little cab carried safely and pleasantly to the Golden Cross in Charing Cross. Here the prices were, to my American experience, so abominably extravagant, I set off soon after dinner on a hunt for a boarding or lodging house. This amusement varied by tea, occupied me till ten at night. We were fortunate enough to obtain a room in a house in Bedford Place, where two American gentlemen and some very pleasant English people are inmates. But more of this hereafter. Adieu. Yours, KERCKECK.

Foreign Correspondence.

LETTER IV.
LONDON, DEC. 26, 1855.

MY DEAR ALBERT:—Since my last letter was mailed, so many objects of interest have engaged my attention, that I am afraid to attempt a description of what we have seen.

The time which I have suffered to elapse since I laid down my pen, makes it doubly hard to resume it. But my promise binds me to say something. Where shall I begin?

Or shall I continue my narrative from the point where it was dropped? Leaving Warwick at 3 P.M., the shades of evening had fallen before we reached that famous seat of learning and loyalty, Oxford. This prevented us from catching glimpses of her domes and spires as we whirled along in the cars. In a few moments after leaving the depot, we were comfortably housed in The George, late Three Coats, which a lady in the omnibus kindly informed us was not of the first class.

Nevertheless, at our departure we were able to assure the inquiring landlady that we had found every thing to our mind.

Supper ended, we wrapt up warmly for a survey of the town by gas light. The air was piercing cold, and the next day, Friday, colder still,—the coldest it was said, which had been felt in England for a hundred years.

Our fortune was to stumble first on Balliol College, an ordinary building at best, and in the high-wrought expectant state of my mind utterly disappointing. This impression was in a measure done away by Exeter College, the Museum, and St. Mary's Church, which we passed in a few minutes walk, but only partially. The next day's inspection could not reconcile me to the dispirited, woe-be-gone exteriors of most of the buildings. The material of which they are principally composed (Sullivan calls it "the tender olive") is not improved, like that of the Chester Cathedral, by the corroding teeth of time and the weather. In the morning early we commenced a chase after the man who set England by the ears, and caused no small stir in America—the famous Dr. Pusey. Our eyes longed to behold the great mischievous of our town affairs been so badly managed as during the past year. Wasteful expenditure, unequal and increased taxation and a general indifference to the public welfare have characterized the municipal officers the past year to an extent never thought possible.

All our fellow citizens, not selfishly interested feel the necessity of a change. Why may we not have a change? We care not whether the men elected are Whig, Democrat, Liberal, Republican or even Know-nothing, provided they are honest and competent for the office to which they may be elected.

Poetry.

Pride.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.
 'Tis a curious fact as ever was known,
 In human nature, but often shown
 Like in castle and cottage,
 That pride, like pigs of a certain breed,
 Will manage to live and thrive on "feed"
 As poor as pauper's porridge!

Of all the notable things on earth,
 The queerest one is pride of birth,
 Among our "fierce Democracy."
 A bridge across a hundred years,
 Without a groan said it from sneers,
 Not even a couple of rotten Peers,
 A thing for laughter, sneers and jeers,
 Is American aristocracy.

Depend upon it my endiblisch friend,
 Your family friend you can't ascend
 Without good reason to apprehend
 You may find it waxed at the further end
 By some plebian vocation!
 Or worse than that, your boustard line,
 May end in a loop of stronger twine
 That plagued some worthy relation!

Because you flourish in worldly affairs,
 Don't be hasty and put on airs,
 With impudent pride on station!
 Don't be proud of your nose,
 At poorer people with plainer clothes,
 But learn for the sake of your mind's repose
 That wealth's a bubble that comes and goes,
 And that all proud flesh wherever it grows,
 Is subject to irritation.

Things found in a Kitchen Drawer.

Three aprons, two devils, the face of a pig,
 A dirty jack-knife, a d—d-clout and wig;
 A foot of a stocking, three pins, a trill,
 A busk and six buttons, mouse traps, a quill,
 A comb and a thumb, with Madam broads,
 A box of specific for chaps in the hands;
 Some snare and some cloves tied up in a rag,
 An empty threat paper, and blue in a bag;
 Short pieces of ribbon, both greasy and black;
 A grater and nutmeg, the key of the jock;
 A inch of wax candle, a steele and a flint;
 A bundle of matches, a parcel of mint;
 A lump of old soot, a clamp for the paste;
 A pair of red garters, a belt for the waist;
 A rusty bent skewer, a broken brass cock,
 Some onions and tender and the drawer lock;
 A bag for the pudding, a whistone and string;
 A peony cross and a new curtain ring;
 Two pieces of soap, a large lump of cheese;
 Five tea-spoons of tin and a large lump of rosin;
 The feet of a hare, and corks by the dozen;
 A card to tell fortunes, a sponge and a can;
 A pen without ink, and a small pattay-can;
 A rolling pin pasty, and a common Prayer Book;
 Are things that I found in the drawer of the cook.

Home.

Where are o'er the realms
 Of this wide world we roam,
 There is nothing so enchanting
 As our dear woodland home.
 There the bird carols highest
 In its wild merry glee,
 And the dew sparkles brightest
 On each leaf covered tree.

How we love each dear spot,
 Where in childhood we played—
 The vine covered nook
 And wild mountain glade—
 The sweet humble floweret
 That blooms at our feet,
 For it decks some familiar
 Time-honored retreat.

There's a charm in the name
 That time cannot efface—
 And a beauty untold
 In each dear sacred place ;
 Sweet sisters, the flowers
 Though far purer than we—
 And a friend is the brook
 Gliding on to the sea.

When hope's brightest visions
 So quickly would fade—
 Dear flowers of the heart-stone
 In beauty decayed ;
 When sorrow had saddened
 The spirit's free tone—
 Ah, where find a refuge
 So endearing as home !

Our Father.

Our Father who art in Heaven,
 Hallowed be thy name;
 Thy kingdom come; thy will be done;
 Through Heaven and earth the same;
 Give us this day our daily bread;
 Our trespasses forgive,
 As also we forgive others
 To such as we aggrieve.
 Into temptation lead us not;
 For thine is the kingdom, glory, power;
 Forever and forever. Amen.

Anecdotes.

A farmer told his man, who was thoroughly Irish, to run into the pasture and catch an ox. "I mean the 'off one,' I will manage the other one myself," he said. Pat ran to do as he was bidden, but suddenly paused, with the exclamation: "He is a reasonable fellow, anyhow. Bedad! and how am I to know which is the orphan!"

A coxcomb talking of the transmigration of souls, said, "In the time of Moses, I have no doubt I was the golden calf."

"Very likely," replied the lady; "time has robbed you of nothing but the gilding."

A yankee who went over to the mother country some time ago, was asked on returning how he liked Great Britain.

"Well," he said, "England is a very nice country, exceeding fertile, well cultivated, very populous, and very wealthy; but I never liked to take a morning walk after breakfast, because the country is so small I was afraid of walking off the edge."

A lady playing on a piano forte, on being called upon for a dead march, asked a celebrated professor of music what she should play. He replied—"Any march that you may play will be a dead one, for you're sure to murder it."

CONDITIONS.

Ezekiel Philpot was born in America, somewhere near the head waters of the Penobscot, and when he arrived at the age of nineteen, had got his growth and 'cut his eye teeth,' a circumstance which was generally admitted by all who knew him. One bright morning in June, Zeke placed his long body in a clean shirt, ran his long legs through a pair of striped trowsers, wrapped a span now waistcoat about his breast, hauled up his stiff cotton duckey and tied a checked gingham about his neck, and then donned his swallow-tailed coat, the brass buttons of which looked like a row of newly risen stars, Zeke was literally a pioneer in the 'Bloumen costume,' at least one would have thought so to see him as he now stood. He disdained to have his trowsers legs dangling in the mud, or to have the cuffs of his coat slopping in the wash bowl, so his blue stockings peeped forth from beneath the tops his cowhides that looked up full six inches to the trowsers buttons, while his bony wrists had free scope from either shirt sleeve or cuff. Zeke's hair, which was of no color in particular, but bore all the lighter shades of the vegetable kingdom, was down flat with pure bear's oil, and directly on the top of his head he put a white hat, somewhat resembling an inverted button finking, and after gazing at his presentment in the looking-glass for four and a half minutes, was ready to say:

'Thar, Mr. Zeke Philpot, if you don't slide on that, I guess that ain't what, that's all!'
Zeke was bound for Boston, with a load of genuine apple sass, and he expected, ere he returned, to make a slight commotion, if not more, in the great metropolis. The old mare was harnessed, and in due course of time Zeke and his load arrived in Boston, where the 'sass' was disposed of to good advantage, and with seventy-five dollars in his pocket, our hero began to look around to see the sights.

'Hel-lo!' exclaimed Zeke, as he stopped one morning before a blazing placard, which adorned one of the back walls in Flag Alley;
what's tarnation that? A Golden Ladder
—a Road to Fort-u-n-e—oh, fortin, that's it—a road to fortin!

Zeke left the crowd in wonder, and made the best of his way to the stable. He shut the door of the shed, and then pulling up his trowsers, he untied from the inside of each knee one half of the steel-toothed leather of his old horse-card!

'Wall, old Dobbin,' said Zeke, patting the mare affectionately on the back, while he held pieces of card-leather in his hand, the sharp teeth of which had been filed sharper, 'rathor guess I ken ford to buy you a new keard now.'

The Attorney General of the United States has decided that an officer of the army is subject to trial for one and the same act by the civil courts, as for a violation of the ordinary law of the land, and also by a court martial for a violation of the military law. Thus, where an officer was indicted for murder on account of the death of a soldier and acquitted, he may still be tried by court martial, and punished.

A London paper states that a lady was recently travelling in an omnibus alongside a fashionably dressed man, who had on his finger a splendid ring; on returning home she missed her purse, but in the lining of her dress she found the ring she had seen on the person who sat beside her in the omnibus.

he accomplished, and was only prevented from bringing about the latter, by the jealousy and hatred of Sparta, a warlike city, in the Peloponnesus. The columns of the Parthenon were composed of the purest Pentelic marble, as were also the floor and steps. On the architrave, directly over the entrance, stood beautiful marble statuary, representing portions of Athenian mythology,—such as the fabled birth of Venus, from the head of Jupiter; the contest between Venus and Neptune, etc. These, together with many other pieces of statuary, now adorn the Museum of London.

It was of this pifering spirit of which Lord Byron speaks in his Childe Harold:—

"but molest not you defenceless urn, Look on this spot,—a nation's sepulcher."

"Twas Jove's,—'tis Mahomet's."

After describing other interesting points in this noblest piece of Grecian architecture, he went on to say, that, although edifice after edifice has been built in modern times, and that, too, after their models, none have ever equalled the great originals; and it is only within a few years that the secret has been discovered, viz.: the system of "curved lines." For example,—it has been found that the lines or edges of the steps, at the base of the Parthenon, instead of being exactly level, are slightly elevated in the middle, and upon taking sight along the edge, you see, not a continuous straight line, but one slightly curved up, or convex. The sides and edges of the columns are cut according to the same system of "curved lines." Mr. Felton spoke at some length on this topic, and I should be glad to follow him farther, but I am afraid I shall tire the patience of both printer and reader. I will, therefore, "wind up," and hope you will not become "out-winded" with my windy epistle.

After speaking at some length of the Agora or Market-place, where all assemblies of the citizens were held, he alluded in touching terms to the thoughts which crowded upon his mind, as he sat in the prison where the immortal Socrates met with calmness and resignation the doom, which an ungrateful country had passed upon him. "As I sat there," said the Lecturer, "and thought that I was on the very spot, where with Christian fortitude, he drained the fatal cup of hemlock, I could but have feelings of reverence for the man, who, in the face of such dangers, could proclaim his belief in 'strange gods'; (this it will be remembered was one of the three charges made against him) and of one who boldly gave credence to a doctrine, which has since spread happiness and civilization throughout the world."

The Lecturer then gave some interesting details relative to the Areopagus, or Mars Hill, which is spoken of in the Bible, as the place where the Apostle Paul addressed the Athenians. "Paul," said he, "was not dragged there by an infatuated populace, as some have supposed, but went there by special invitation, and voluntarily. Besides, none but distinguished persons were permitted to address the people from this eminence. Nor, in the midst of these distinguished honors, and while they were showing him such peculiar marks of respect, is it at all probable that Paul would have had the boldness to have offered them such an insult, as he is said to, in Acts xvii. 22. 'Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things you are too superstitious.'

"For as I passed by, and behold your depositions, I found an altar, with this inscription, 'To the Unknown God.' When therefore you ignorantly worship,' &c. Far from it! Paul not only had too much refinement and good taste to offer any such indignity, but, he also knew that the Athenians, priding themselves, as they justly might, on their advancement, would not brook such an insult."

"The true version," said the Lecturer, "is this:—

"I perceive that you are not only well inclined to receive, but have already entertained something of this new doctrine."

"For as I passed by, I beheld an altar, with this inscription, 'To the Unknown God.' Whom therefore you have already commenced to worship, as invisible and unknown, Him declare I unto you."

But I have already lengthened out too much, and would only say, in conclusion, that this was, to my mind, the most interesting lecture of the present popular course, and that much credit is due the President of the Lyceum, for his zealous and successful efforts.

QUI EST?

PETERSON'S LADIE'S NATIONAL MAGAZINE for January, has been for some time on our table. It contains twenty extra pages as a New Year's gift to its readers. Two spirited steel engravings, "The Morning Bath," "The Departure of Rebecca," and a wood engraving — "Lighting the Beacon," adorn its pages. New music, patterns for crochet needle work, etc., and the contributions of many popular writers make up the remainder of the contents.

This Magazine is edited by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, authoress of "Fashion and Fancy," and "The Old Homestead Farm," together with Charles J. Peterson, author of Kate Aylesford, one of the best stories of our Revolutionary period that has been written.

The terms of this Magazine are very low! two dollars a year and a reduction of price to clubs of three, five and more. Now is the time to subscribe.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

WHITEHOUSE'S NEW ENGLAND BARDS.
We have seen the programme to be sung by this popular troupe on Tuesday evening next at the Town Hall, and are happy to be thus enabled to promise our readers a musical treat of a high order, embracing a variety suited to all tastes. Most of their pieces are composed expressly for them, with particular regard to the proper development of the individual beauties of each. This with a company of mediocre powers would ensure a good entertainment, but with performers of such talent as Whitehouse, Durant, and Tenney, not forgetting the charming Nellie Wilder, a feast of music may be relied on, such as will delight all who listen, and call forth the regrets of those who neglect this opportunity. We trust they may be greeted by a large audience, and thus be induced to place our town among their regular not-to-be-omitted places in their future tours.

Foreign Correspondence.

LETTER VI.
LONDON, DEC. 28, 1855.

Although we have seen a good deal today, yet we have not seen much, which my dear friend, admits of easy treatment at the hands of an ignorant like myself, of architecture. St. Paul's and Greenwich Hospitals gave us more than work enough for the few hours that intervene between a London breakfast at half past nine, and a London twilight. Except in the hands of a master, description of buildings possessing architectural merit, is either unintelligible from obscurity, or tedious from a long array of figures. By the way, how provoking it is, after you have gazed your fill at some chaste, sweet temple or solemn Gothic pile, to find in some snarling book an unanswerable demonstration that you failed to notice the beauties, and admire only faults! An apparently able article in the London Guide, on St. Paul's Cathedral, which I read after my day's work was done, did not, it is true, convict me of utter barbarism, but it did in some degree disturb the complacency with which I looked back upon my opened mouthed wonder at the vast dimensions, the massive strength, and the wonderful dome of St. Paul's.

say original, because they were erected for a palace by the Stuarts, who left them in an unfinished state. When William and Mary ascended the throne, they were decided to Sir John Somers Knight, keeper of the Great Seal, and others, as a hospital for infirm and disabled seamen, the sustentation of their widows, and the education of their children. The north-west quarter occupies the site of the old palace of Placentia, famed as the birth place of Henry VIII. Edward VI. Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth. We were shown a window through which Prince Charles escaped from the soldiers of Cromwell. This tradition rests in the present instance, on the information and veracity of our polite old guide; but, unless some portions of the former palace were incorporated into the modern structure, his chronology would have no foundation to stand upon, for Charles II. himself founded the palace we saw. It was in this building that a much dignified personage was pointed out to us as Lord Nelson's servant. He was intently engaged in reading, and did not look up when we passed. His head was perfectly white. All that can be seen from the centre of the grounds was designed by Inigo Jones and Sir Christopher Wren.

One in two years each man receives a complete suit of clothes, and annually a pair of trowsers, cocked hat, round hat, three pairs of stockings, and four pairs of shoes. Their lines is changed when worn out, their shoes repaired at the expense of the institution, and a great coat is allowed them, which is also changed when required. The full complement of pensioners is 2,710.

The climbing of stairs to the Whispering Gallery, the ride, and survey of the Hospital, made rest and a quiet dinner at the Trafalgar acceptable. The sitting-room looked out upon the Thames. Every moment some sailing vessel or steamer darted past. A large dark ship, suddenly dashing by, made us realize how near we were to the continent of Europe, for she was apparently fresh from some foreign port. This busy scene, our neighborhood to the spot where England's greatest King and Queen, father and child drew their first breath, the lateness of the hour disposing one to meditation; all conspired to render our brief occupancy of that parlor, a point for the light of memory to rest upon, a point for the light of memory to rest upon.

Poetry.

And He Took a Child.

Into the little gray churchyard
All with memorial crosses starr'd,
And mounds, a fixed sea;
Weeping, woman slow doth bear
Her first-born child, and lays him there
Under the old yew tree;
And resurrection flowers,
Those earliest darling of the spring,
Pale, drooping snowdrops, she doth bring,
And o'er the small grave showers.

"Tis summer now, but ah! behold
Another form stretched on the mound,
A little, little form.
Deep sighs have marked the mother's brow,
Her step is soft and very slow;
She loosens from her arm
(Oh, still, then quivering lip!)
A basket brimming o'er with gems,
From nature's endless diadems,
Over the turf to lie.

Autumn—and to that churchyard drear
Her third sad offering to the year
That mourning mother bore;
All day beside it watch; then slow
With one thick, sighing sob of woe,
From out the heart, she tore
Of that old scathed yew
A pendant branch of richest green,
With scarlet berries set between,
And o'er the hillock threw.

Yet once again that grave she sought;
Her last-born fairest child, she brought;
And laid beside the rest:
The Christian lay low on the ground,
No flower nor bough to be found
To deck its little bier.
"Twas but one other pang!
She laid her down beside her child,
A smile of deepest peace she smiled—
That night the Angels sang!

Dust:

Dust we were, and dust to be,
Dust upon us, dust about us,
Dust on everything we see.
Dust within us, dust without us;
Saith the preacher, "Dust to dust!"
Let them mingle, for they must.

Dust we raise upon the road,
Dust we breathe in dancing-hall;
Dust infests our home shade;
Dust, a pall, is over all;
Tis the housewife's daily bane,
Dust the emblem of the dead!

When the sky above is fair,
And the sun upon us streams,
Flows the dust throughout the air,
Gleaming in its fallen beams;
Every mote is like a man,
Dancing gaily while he can.

Ere the tempest gathers strong,
Blows at the time the warning gust,
O'er the plain it sweeps along,
Tempest's thrill, a cloud of dust;
Every mote is like a man,
Flying from Oppression's van.

Now the swollen clouds grow dark,
Comes the long-expected flood,
Falling dread-like and stark;
Dust is beating down to mud,
So are times when men must grovel,
In the palace as in the bovel.

Thus we are but motes of dust,
On the ground and in the air,
Blow by pleasure, fear and lust,
Beating down to low despair;
Burst of dust, to come to dust,
Let us mingle, for we must.

Waiting for the Train.

Snow-drifts in the valleys,
Snow-drifts on the plain,
Snow-drifts on the highway,
Snow-drifts in the lane,
Bless me, how delightful,
Waiting for the train!

Forty anxious passengers,
Deposit by seven,
Holds by dint of squeezing,
Only twenty-seven!
Fat man on the platform,
Half obscured by snow,
Tries to wedge inside—desists,

Finding it no go,
Woman with a key,
Cannot get a clue,
Holds the late innocent
Darling in the air;

Baby rather frantic,
Goes against his grain,
In a crowded depot,
Waiting for the train!

Lawyer from the city,
Looks a little down,
Just received some evidence,
Joking versus Brown,
Can't help being nervous,
Come comes on to-him;
He, defendant's counsel,
Thirteen miles away.

Hours grow out of minutes,
Time spans are space,
Snow-flake after snow-flake,
Leads a weary chase.

Passenger get wrathy,
Bitterly complain,
Do not seem to relish
Waiting for the train!

Snow-drifts in the valley,
Snow-drifts on the plain,
Snow-drifts on the highway,
Snow-drifts in the lane,
Bless me, how delightful,
Waiting for the train!

Anecdotes.

A magistrate asked an Irishman whom he was questioning—"Have you ever seen the sea? Does your worship suppose I was trundled all the way over the salt ocean in a wheel-barrow?"

A fellow was arrested for stealing ducks, and after a description of them the counsel for the prisoner said—"Why, they can't be such a rare breed, for I've some like them in my own yard."

"Very likely," said the complainant; "I've lost a good many ducks lately."

power it possesses of absorbing oxygen and nitrogen from the atmosphere, in proportions very different from those in which they exist in the air. The atmosphere, as already stated, contains twenty-one per cent. of oxygen by volume (or bulk,) but the air which is present in the pores of the snow has been found by various observers to contain a much smaller quantity. Boussingault obtained air disengaged by melting snow, seventeen per cent. of oxygen only, and De Saussure found still less. The difficulty of respiration experienced on very high mountains has been attributed to the nature of the air liberated from snow, when melted by the sun's rays. Whether the air retained among the pores of the snow, which in severe winters covers our corn-fields, be equally deficient in oxygen with that examined by Boussingault, and whether, if it be, the abundance of nitrogen can at all affect vegetation, are matters that still remain undetermined.

A thick light covering of porous earth, not beaten down, preserves the potato pit from the effects of the frost better than a sheet of compact coating of clay, in the same way as snow protects the herbage better than a sheet of ice; and it is because of the porosity of the covering, that ice may be preserved more effectually, and for a longer period, in a similar pit, than in many well constructed ice-houses. — F. W. Johnson.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 9th, 1855.

"BORN TO NO MASTERS, OF NO SPECTRE, WE."

CONGRESS. The House, on Saturday last, adopted the plurality rule and Hon. N. P. Banks of this State, was elected Speaker. Previously Mr. Orr withdrew his name as the democratic candidate, and Mr. Aiken united a larger number than any other man of that party. The plurality rule passed by a vote of 113 to 104, and the decisive ballot stood—Bank 103, Aiken 100, Fuller 6, Campbell of Ohio 4, Wells 1. So ended the nine weeks' struggle!

On Monday last, Mr. Cullom of Penn. was elected Clerk of the House, being supported by Republicans and Americans.

THE COWHARD AFFAIR. The trial of Coburn and Dalton in Boston, for the alleged manslaughter of William Sumner of Milton, occupying nine days, was brought to a close on Saturday night last. The jury found them "not guilty of manslaughter, but guilty of assault and battery." Sentence has been delayed for a short time.

OLD COLONY AND FALL RIVER RAILROAD. At the annual meeting of this corporation, held in Boston last week, the following Directors were chosen by a nearly unanimous vote: Alexander Holmes, Kingston; Richard Borden, Fall River; Peter H. Peirce, Middleboro'; Francis B. Crownshield, William J. Walker, Caleb C. Gilbert, and James H. Beal, Boston.

The contract with the Dorchester and Milton Branch Railroad was submitted. It provides that the Old Colony and Fall River Corporation is to operate said branch; the receipts are to be divided into two equal parts, one of which, and fifty cents per mile from the other part, are to go to the operating corporation. Not more than six trains each day, are to be run; and the prices of season tickets are to be materially increased.

KANSAS. This unfortunate country is suffering nearly all the horrors of a civil war; they have no security for either person or property. This state of things has been brought about principally by the injudicious interference, to say the least, of those who have no direct interest in her welfare, but who are exciting the worst passions among the actual settlers, merely for partisan purposes. A fearful responsibility rests some, where, which the people will not be backward in visiting on the heads of the guilty.

A RARE CHANCE FOR THOSE IN WANT OF DRY GOODS. We take great pleasure in calling attention to the sale at the Store of Messrs. George Turnbull & Co., Nos. 5 and 7, Winter Street, Boston. A stock embracing such a variety of well selected goods, and of which every article has been reduced in price, offers an attraction which well deserves the patronage that is bestowed upon it. Our housekeepers, and the ladies generally, should not neglect this rare opportunity.

THE CONCERT.—The entertainment given by Whitehouse's New England Bands, in this town, on Tuesday evening last, was well attended by a delighted auditory. The beauty of the songs and the rich melody of the Bands

"Seemed to take the entranced soul
And wrapt it in Elysium."

THE PEAK FAMILY.—This popular family will give one of their much admired entertainments in this town, as will be noticed by their card in to-day's paper. Their bell ringing, singing and other performances are really excellent and richly worth the price of admission.

Foreign Correspondence.

DEAR COUSIN.—Your kind letter was finally received. It was a long while on its way, but none the less valuable on that account. The cheering intelligence which it contained, of the continued health and prosperity of the dear ones at home, was a source of comfort to me in many a long and dreary hour. You have received, I doubt, full particulars of our doings in this land of blood and carnage,—still, to gratify myself, and redeem a former pledge, I will dot down what passed under my own observation, trusting, it will not be entirely devoid of interest to you.

I landed in the month of January, 1855, at Batzalara; the weather being very severe, snow, frost and sleet, being our daily companions, and the want of warm clothing and provisions, rendering our situation almost beyond endurance. Our regiment very soon after our arrival, was ordered up to the front ranks, the severest duty I ever did. We occupied this position during the winter and spring; exposed night and day to the enemy's fire, and also to night attacks. Our Regiment distinguished itself on many occasions; and for her cool bravery and bold daring, won herself into favorable notice of the generals of the army; she justly earned the sobriquet of the "Fighting Regiment." Our daily occupation for twelve long months was in building batteries and trenches, and our works at last reached within two hundred yards of the Fortress of Sebastopol. During the siege, our Regiment suffered tremendously; our ranks were sadly thinned by the volleys of fire through which we had to pass. The attack on the 15th of June, of which you no doubt have the particulars, was the only one in which the Allies were repulsed with severe loss. Our Regiment was the only one which entered Sebastopol; there was no regiment to support us, and we were left to the unaided fire of the enemy for eighteen hours, and then was obliged to abandon our position. I volunteered on a storming party the evening before; it was then reported that the whole of Sebastopol was undermined, and it was also rumored that the first party which entered its walls would be blown to pieces. I have received some scratches which I shall carry with me to the grave, to remind me of the fields of Scutopoli.

The courageous and daring Wolfe; his boats silently and swiftly moving towards the heights of Abraham, in the darkness of night, in keeping with the high reputation he has so richly acquired. Major Bundy of the Hancock House prepared a most superb supper which elicited the praise of all who feasted at his tables. "Keokuck," appeared in his usual affable manner characteristic of the gentleman and scholar.

GRAY'S ELEGY; written in a country Church-yard. We have before us a new edition of this surpassing poem; one of the most popular in any language, and which, from its soothing and kindly influence on the human heart, should be in every dwelling house in the land. Each and every verse of the thirty-two, of which it is composed, is a gem of beauty. How many of the words are household, it would be superfluous for us to tell.

GENERAL COURT.—The Legislature of this State holds its daily sessions and takes preparatory steps towards business matters. Our correspondent will apprise the readers of the Patriot of measures of importance when presented.

CLAN CHOWDER. The Proprietor of the

Granite Saloon, in consequence of the organization of the House, and the ultimate settlement of that difficulty, will serve up an extra dish, this afternoon and evening, from the new species of that fish, known in this quarter, as the "Congo Soft Shells."

He illustrated by his death the following month, that

"The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Gray's elegy gave solace to the dying members of Webster, and has exercised a goodly influence, by its extraordinary beauty, simplicity and power, over many a troubled soul.

The present edition is fully illustrated; a portrait of Daniel Webster appears as frontispiece, and a brief biographical sketch of him is included in the volume, which is well adapted for general circulation.

MORE TRUTH THAN FICTION; or Stories for Little Folks at Home. By Aunt Martha. 18 mo., pp. 110. Boston. James French and Company.

This is a very neat and prettily illustrated volume. The stories aim to exercise a good moral influence on little folks and it would be deemed by many an appropriate pretty present for children.

The statistical tables of mortality shows a reduction in this country of the proportion of deaths from pulmonary diseases. Dr. Ayer attributes the result to the effect of his Chrysanthemum Pills.

But let me be as frugal as I may find it impossible to lay by anything; there are so many little electives that the life of a soldier calls into requisition, that I feel sure, without pressing you, I shall never return a rich man. The English army is a strong unit writing very healthfully and abundantly supplied with all the necessities, to suit the luxuries of life. Our camp before the town was filled with spies; with Greek, Russian and natives of the soil, who reported our plans and strategy to the enemy, which accounts for their sometimes circumventing us. One cause for our failure on the 15th of July, was in part owing to a misunderstanding between the French and English generals as to the plan of operations.

I have travelled Sebastopol over since we have become masters of it, and was surprised at the formidable appearance which it presented. It appears to have been one mass of fortresses.

The Russian soldiers are good, but are not to be compared to the English or French. I have seen soldiers of almost all nations, but for a regular charge I know of none that will equal the Irish; they carry every thing before them. When Paddy's blood is up, he's very direful.

Preparations are being made for the spring campaign; if peace should not be ratified in the mean time, one of the fiercest and most bloody conflicts will ensue, which the world before witness.

Yours truly, B.

For the Patriot.
"Let the Union Slip."

Mr. EDITOR:—I was waited on last evening by two of the Conductors of the "Under-ground Railroad," from Kansas to the shores of Upper Canada, (who, by the way, we are informed, are making money by their black operations,) with the request that we would unite with them in getting up some mark of demonstration in honor of the individual who accidentally fills the chair of Speaker in the House of Washington. They stated their needy circumstances, that they were out of caste and out of funds, and desired us to say, that any contribution which might be offered, whether in old clothes or cold victuals, would be thankfully received. After "Giving the Subject some Study," like the Waltham pebble-gagger and arriver at a similar conclusion, that we could not discover any marked difference in the mental capacity, physical organization, or ability for self government, between the adherents of that gentleman and the sons of Africa, our curiosity became awakened to have the thing put to a practical test. Let us therefore, at an early day, have a Grand Amalgamation Levee, where Africa may be fairly represented on the broad Abolition platform.

For the Patriot.
Congress.

The SPEAKERSHIPS. The Federalists in this quarter are in high glee at the result of the labor of the House on Saturday last.

The election of Mr. Banks they claim as a Federal triumph,—which appears to have raised new hopes and even new desires in that poor, old, antiquated party.

But what reason they have for such boisterous demonstrations of joy, we cannot conceive. Have they, in reality, gained a victory, or achieved anything which the Democratic party could not have done, had they seen fit, as their Federal opponents have, to falsify their principles, and bemean themselves by amalgamating with every thing vile which offered? Most assuredly not. Who then is the victor? The poor, miserable, vacillating, falsifying poltroon, who, by stealth crept into the chair, or he, who threw himself into the gap to stay the tide of corruption, and was therefore unsuccessful? Or who think you, holds the ascendancy in the affections of the people? Those who rallied in defence of the Constitution and the maintenance of the laws, or the infuriated and bedlamite mob, who had no scruples of violating its principles, or trampling its sacred obligations under foot—and if needs be, "Let the Union Slip."

The scenes enacted at Washington the past two months, is silently laying its effects upon the minds of the people. "The Sober Second Thought," will set all things right—the woe to the traitors who have betrayed their confidence, and misrepresented their feelings.

The LATE SOIREE.—This levee and ball given by the military of the Fourth Regiment, complimentary to "KEOKUCK," of Weymouth, a correspondent for the public prints, took place last Friday evening, at the Town Hall, in this town. It was fully attended, and would have been quite large, had not the weather been unpropitious and the railroad travelling very uncertain. It was however a brilliant affair, and ranked as the party of the season. More than one hundred couples attended, and all were satisfied and delighted. The music by White's Band of Weymouth was excellent, and largely contributed to enliven the affair. The decorations by Col. Wm. Beal of Boston, was in keeping with the high reputation he has so richly acquired. Major Bundy of the Hancock House prepared a most superb supper which elicited the praise of all who feasted at his tables. "Keokuck," appeared in his usual affable manner characteristic of the gentleman and scholar.

Watch Mother!

Mother! watch the little feet
Climbing o'er the garden wall,
Bounding through the busy street,
Ranging cellar, shed and hall.
Never count the moments lost,
Never mind the time it cost;
Little feet will go astray,
Guide them, mother, while you may.

Mother! watch the little hand
Picking berries by the way,
Making holes in the sand,
Tossing up the fragrant hay,
Never dare the question ask,
"Why to me this weary task?"
These same little hands may prove Messengers of light and love.

Mother! watch the little tongue
Prattling eloquent and wild,
What is said, and what is sung,
By the happy, joyous child.
Catch the word while yet unspoken,
Stop the tongue before its broken;
The same tongue may yet proclaim
Blessings in a Saviour's name.

Mother! watch the little heart
Beating soft and warm for you;
Wholesome lessons now import;
Keep that young heart true.
Extricating every weed,
Sowing good and precious seed;
Harvest rich you then may see,
Reaping for eternity.

By and By.

There is an angel ever near,
When toil and trouble vex and try,
That bids our fainting hearts take cheer,
And whispers to us—"By and by."

We hear it at our mother's knee:
With tender smile and love-lit eye
She grants some boon on childish plea,
In these soft accents—"By and by."

What visions crowd the youthful breast—
What holy aspirations high
Nerve the young heart to do its best,
And wait the promise—"By and by."

The maiden sitting sad and lone,
Her thoughts half uttered with a sigh,
Nurses the grief she will not own,
And dreams bright dreams of—By and by.

The pale young wife dries up her tears,
And stills her restless infant's cry,
To catch the coming step, but hears,
How sadly whispered—"By and by."

And manhood, with his strength and will
To broast his ill's and fate dey,
Though fame and fortune be his, still Plans that lie in—"By and by."

The desolute, whose scanty fare
The weary task can scarce supply,
Cheat the grim visage of Despair,
With Hope's fair promise—"By and by."

The millions whom oppression wrongs
Send up to heaven their wailing cry,
And, writhing in the tyrant's thongs
Still hope for freedom—"By and by."

Thus ever o'er life's rugged way,
This angel, bending from the sky,
Bequiles our sorrows day by day,
With her sweet whisperings—"By and by."

Anecdotes.

A queer genius had made frequent gracious promises to his troubled friend that he would put himself out of the way. One stinging cold night he vowed he would go out and freeze himself to death.

About eleven o'clock he returned, shivering and snapping his fingers.

"Why don't you freeze?" asked a loving relative.

"Golly!" said the pseudo-suicide, "when I freeze I mean to take a warmer night than this for it."

"Slocum, how is it to-day, can you take that note up?"

"I'm sorry to say that I can't—never was so cramped, in my life."

"By the way you are always cramped, are you not?"

"I'm sorry to say I am; and yet there is a natural cause for it."

"What is that?"

"Why I was weaned on green apples and watermelons."

"Sam, how do you like that knife I sold you last week?"

"So, so. It is not very sharp, yet you managed to shave me with it."

A lady offered to bet her husband fifty dollars that she would not speak a word for a week.

"Dame," said the delightful husband, staking the money, which the lady immediately put into her pocket, observing very gravely that she would secure it until the wager was decided.

"Why," said the husband, "I have won it already."

"You are mistaken in the time," said the lady. "I mean the week after I am buried."

For the Patriot.

Mrs. Eaton; Or too Refined to Labor

BY THE AUTHOR OF "DORA GRAFTON, OR EVERY CLOUD HAS A SILVER LINING."

Now, Mr. Eaton, if you are going out this evening I have a word or two to say. It is so seldom you spend an hour at home after your meals, that I am obliged to talk with you holding your hat in hand, as though it was your intention to improve the first pause to gain the street. Do try to be civil enough once to listen attentively to what I have to say; what a pity it is you are not possessed of the refined tastes of your wife, then you would enjoy conversing with me rather than seeking the society of those vulgar people the "Feltons." This was said by a fashionably dressed lady with long curly hair who was wicked enough to believe had adorned the brow of some loveliness being in times past to her husband, who having finished his evening meal was preparing to depart as was his usual custom, to seek some more congenial company than that of his double refined wife.

Mr. Eaton was one, who, as his wife knew,

had long sentimental talk most wretchedly, he was a plain matter-of-fact sort of a person and thought more of adding to his already large amount of dollars and cents than he did to his store of knowledge, which was rather scantily supplied. Seating himself with great deliberation, and placing his feet

upon the fender, while with great coolness

he laid his hat upon a table near by and folding his arms tightly, he said slowly, "Please to proceed Mrs. Eaton?" His good lady felt somewhat irritated at the provoking coolness of her "leige lord," and no wonder poor thing that she did, a pair more unequally yoked were never joined by hymens silken fitters.

Likely as not when she was the most eloquent in imparting some of those refined ideas that she possessed in such abundance, his mind was all the time busily occupied with some business transaction of his own;

and when she would pause to take breath and inquire in soft tones, "do not you agree with me, my dear?" — he would answer, "well, really Mrs. Eaton, I do not remember one word you have said, please commence again."

Now this was very trying to a lady of her refinement, but in the present instance,

she thought best to swallow her indignation, and "to proceed" as he had requested her to do.

"It is not my intention Mr. Eaton to induce any dull theorum for discussion, but to converse with you upon a practical and equally interesting subject to you as myself.

It relates to the future education of our Albert.

At this time we were thinking about sending him to some institution where he can enjoy superior advantages to those of the school

he now attends. It is my wish that our son should choose a professional life, and you know, for him to be fitted for this he must receive every educational advantage before he enters a collegiate course, as of course you intend for him to do, my dear.

"I of course intend no such thing," was the ironical reply of her husband.

"How can you say so Mr. Eaton, I do not see how you can bear to have your son degrade himself by any menial employment.

It will do well enough for some people to make mechanics of their sons, but it will not do for people of our standing in society.

And as to my Albert ever becoming a counter-jumper, it fairly shocks my delicate nerves to think of it for a moment. How can you be so decidedly vulgar in your tastes—your intimacy with the Feltons makes you united to appreciate the beauties of refinement."

"Honest labor Mrs. Eaton never degraded any man, 'tis the man makes the profession, not the profession the man; and if you mean by some people's sons, the children of your cousin, Mrs. Felton, let me tell you whether they become mechanics or counter-jumpers (as you are pleased to call what your own husband once was,) that they will honor the situation they may fill. George and Henry Felton are boys that any mother would be proud to own—they will never degrade themselves if they do not enter college and become professional gentlemen, nor will they be ashamed of their father because he was a mechanic.

"It is my sincere wish that you would not be forever reminding me that those low bred people are in any way related to me; 'tis bad enough to know the fact without being so often told of it, and then too, to have them set up as an example for me to follow. The wife of a rich banker has no sympathy for that of a mechanic in common circumstances."

"Not even when they are own cousins I suppose," rejoined Mr. Eaton sarcastically.

"Because a cousin of mine chances to de-mean herself by marrying as she did, does it follow that I am obliged to regard her as a perfect being? But Mr. Eaton, we are departing sadly from the subject in question. I cannot bear to think that after all my pains to make something of our son, that would do credit to the teachings of his mother, I must be opposed in this, as I am always by my husband. Oh, that I had wedded one more congenial to my refined taste." Then falling into a violent state of weeping followed by loud hysterical laughing, Mr. Eaton was obliged to defer an anticipated visit to the Feltons, to administer relief to his distressed wife. He promised if she would but calm herself that Albert should immediately be sent to any institution of learning she might name. Mrs. Eaton had carried the day, though the excitement had brought on so severe and nervous a headache that she was obliged to immediately seek her couch, leaving Mr. Eaton alone to think over the events of the evening. He was a person who hated scenes of all kinds, and he had only acted this time as he had often before; consented against his better judgment, so as to avoid trouble. After his wife had retired he sat a long time watching the bright light of the fire in the grate. Yes, thought he, Albert may possibly enter college, but I am thinking his wife will hold up both her hands in horror at the idea of her son, who from infancy she had striven to make refined, enter-tain such a ridiculous notion.

"What are you going to do?" said his father while his mother held up both her hands in horror at the idea of her son, who from infancy she had striven to make refined, enter-tain such a ridiculous notion.

"I am going to fill the vacancy in Mr. Brigham's carpenter shop, caused by the absence of George Felton. Mrs. Eaton faint-ed. But in after years when her own fortune had become reduced, she was thankful that Albert was heard in the entry, screaming at the top of the kitchen stairs for the key of the store-room door.

"Be quiet, master Albert, replied the girl, your mother was taken suddenly ill-to-night, and your father is at home in the parlor."

"I shall catch it now I guess, said the youth in a low tone, but I know enough to get out of a scrape as well as to get into it; I'll make father think I wanted to get some nice jelly to carry up to mother." Saying which he marched straight into the parlor; as his father made no mention of his loud talking, he of course was silent on the subject.

"Albert, your mother wants you to go to college one of these days, and so I shall send you to Mr. D——, to prepare for it?"

"What does she want me to go to college for?"

"To learn, of course. Should you like to go?"

"Yes sir," said Albert, thinking of the fine times he would have among so many gay young men.

From this time his thoughts were all upon going to college; and his fond mother was delighted, thinking of the future greatness of her son as a professional gentleman. Albert was placed under the tuition of Mr. Dunn at the same time George Felton was apprenticed to a carpenter, and Henry entered a store as clerk or counter-jumper as Mrs. Eaton termed him. During the two years that Albert remained under the care of Mr. Dunn that worthy gentleman found great difficulty in keeping his pupil's mind upon his books, and at the close of the term wrote to his parents that although their son was not wanting in natural ability, his mind was so easily drawn from his books that he thought it useless to think of his entering college, besides as a friend, he frankly told them he considered it an unfit place for one so easily influenced as he was, there were so many temptations attending such a life to which of necessity he would be exposed. He also gently hinted that a little hard work would be no injury to him, and might cure him of some of his wildness. Mr. Dunn was for profiting by this timely advice, but Mrs. E. was deaf to his words, she would not think of such a thing, and was really quite angry with Mr. Dunn that he should presume to advise hard labor for their son; she would have him know they were people of too much refinement for such vulgar notions. For the sake of peace in the family Mr. Eaton again gave up his better judgment, and Albert entered college. During this time George Felton was place a man six rods distance with a musket and bayonet, and before he can bring the bayonet into use, the rifle can be loaded and discharged ten times. They carry balls with great precision and force. He intends these rifles to become a national weapon; and should Congress, by using a little liberality, purchase the patent, the country would be possessed of a means of warfare unequalled in the world.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 16th, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

DEAD BODY FOUND. An inquest was held by Silas Binney, Esq., Coroner, on the body of a stranger found dead at North Weymouth, on the 12th inst., in an unoccupied barn, nearly a half a mile from any occupied dwelling house, and from appearance and evidence before the jury, was supposed to have been there for ten days. In his pocket was found thirty-one cents in money, and a card with the following written upon it: "Gilbert Hill, Amherst, N. H. By Freight."

The man was of medium size, and about 55 or sixty years old. Verdict of the jury was, "That he came to his death from exposure."

MILITARY AND CIVIC LEVEE AND BALL. The Hancock Light Guards, under the escort of their popular commander, Captain Packard, will hold a Levee to conclude with a Ball, at the Town Hall, on the 22d instant, in commemoration of the Birth-day of the Father of his Country. This day is a propitious one to awaken broad national feelings; to sink in forgetfulness the petty differences of the hour,—and to realize the fact, that we are in reality a confederacy of brothers; united by the same interest,—with one common country, and one destiny. Although Virginia by birthright may claim him as her own, still his fame is the inheritance of all; and the sons of Massachusetts will ever do reverence to the memory of him, "Who was First in War, First in Peace, and First in the Hearts of his Countrymen".

The most extensive preparations, we learn are being made by the Light Guards, to render this assembly one of the most popular of the season.

The Hall will be tastefully decorated by Col. Beal; appropriate speeches will be offered; Tables bountifully supplied with refreshments will also be provided, and the best of music will be in attendance to enliven the occasion, and accompany those who may join in the

"Tread of the mazy dance."

Our citizens should make a general rally on this occasion, and unite with this patriotic corps in their laudable endeavors to render a just tribute to the memory of the illustrious dead.

CONGRESS. The business of the House to complete its organization is progressing slowly. Her committees have nearly all been appointed, but not to the satisfaction of the rabid abolitionists, we observe; there is considerable bad feeling expressed by them at the turn which events have taken and much heart-burdening. Whether they will be able to effect their object, in giving the "Union a Slave," a few months will determine.

KANSAS. The threatening aspect of affairs in this Territory, has made it necessary for the President to issue another proclamation. It is a straight-forward document,—covers the whole ground of difficulty, with the intimation that the whole force of the country will be brought into requisition if necessary to preserve order and the peaceful administration of the laws. He warns all persons without its borders to desist from any interference in the affairs of that Territory, as they will be held strictly accountable for any violation of the laws of the land.

The conductors of the Boston Journal would do well to remember this.

THE PEAK FAMILY. Notwithstanding the unpleasant state of the weather, and the extra fee for admission, this excellent troupe of vocal and instrumental performers, drew one of the largest and most fashionable audiences of the season. Their bell-ringing we do not believe can be equalled, and their other performances appeared to give general satisfaction.

COUGHS AND COLDS. At this season of the year when coughs and colds are so prevalent, a reliable remedy in such cases is important to all the afflicted. Of Dr. Stone's medicine, which will be found advertised in our paper, the Montreal Pilot says:

The astonishing demand for G. W. Stone's Cough Medicine, and its complete success in curing afflictions of the throat and lungs, fully prove that we were justified in recommending it to readers on its introduction to the public; and we can safely assert that no remedy has ever become so deservedly popular in the same space of time.—Lowell News.

CLAM CHOWDER. Let the Proprietor of the Granite Saloon be remembered at this season of conviviality and patriotic rejoicings. His friends will receive a most cordial reception at his "Head Quarters," this afternoon and evening.

State Liquor Agency.

The first Annual Report of the Commissioner, (A. S. Mansfield, Esq.) appointed under the act of last year to purchase and sell spirituous and intoxicating liquors of pure quality to the several city and town agents, was presented to the Senate the present week, and ordered to be printed.

The Commissioner has hired the store, No. 150 Milk Street, Boston, for $1,000 per annum. No sales have been made during the year, to any except authorized agents, and the packages sold have been carefully sealed as provided by law. All his foreign wines and liquors have been purchased of houses of established reputation and probity, and in the original packages. He can therefore certify that none but pure liquors have been sold. The business has thus far required a capital of $30,000, and the stock on hand now amounts to about that sum. The general results of the business, from Jan. 1st, 1855, to Jan. 1st, 1856, are as follows:

Wines and liquors sold at cost	$107,892.45
Birds and kegs	1,148.62
Demijohns	191.86
Record Books for agents	47.25
Trunkage	345.05
Repacking and waste (as estimated)
(but not equal to waste alone)	700.35
Total sales	$110,325.61
Commissions at 5 per cent.	5,499.49
Total sales, charge and commissions	$115,825.12
The expenses of Commissioners, no part of which has been charged to cities and towns, are:
Rent of stores and taxes	$617.49
Clerk hire	667.98
Repacking and delivering	1,230.22
Interest on capital, $30,000	1050.00
Total	3595.67
Leaving the Commissioners, as a compensation for his services	$1,903.82
The sales by months have been:
For January	$34,450.47
July	28,866.69
August	20,301.22
September	14,432.03
October	10,916.49
November	7,346.07
December	5,412.46
Total	$115,825.12

The above shows a regular decrease in the demand since the opening of the office. Agents generally bought a year's supply in their first purchases. The sale for the first year will probably amount to between $130,000 and $150,000.

The number of cities which have purchased, are 11; number of towns over 1000 inhabitants, 222; under 1000, 22; total cities and towns, 52; total cities and towns which have not purchased, 26.

The agent seems to think that he should have been able to have driven a much more profitable business, if the town agents had complied more generally with the requisitions of the law. This no doubt would have been the case, as some of the larger cities and towns, such as instance, as Boston, Marblehead, Salem, Charlestown, &c., refused to supply their wants at the spiritual reservoir of the State, and the prospect now is, that the speculation of his "Temperance Excellency," for the present year, will prove an entire failure.

Consecration.

The following highly interesting remarks were made by Dr. William S. Pattee, at the Consecration of the Mount Wollaston Cemetery, November 1st, 1855.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—In behalf of the Cemetery Committee, I now offer a few remarks, on the origin and progress of the present Cemetery, now about to be consecrated to the sacred dead.

One year ago last March, at the annual town meeting, a Committee was chosen to take into consideration the subject of a new Cemetery for the town, and report at the adjourned meeting in April, (if thought expedient,) a proper site for the purpose. The Committee visited several sections of the town, and after due deliberation decided upon the present locality as possessing more than any other, the natural advantages for a Burying-ground; and accordingly reported to the town, and said Report was by them accepted.

This land was originally a part of Mount Wollaston, and a grant to the town of Braintree, (now Quincy) about two hundred years ago, by the noble, generous, and high-minded William Coddington, a name deserving ever to be remembered by the inhabitants of this place.

Mr. Coddington, on account of religious persecution was obliged to sacrifice his large property at Boston, and improvements at Braintree, and with a number of others, removed to the State of Rhode Island.*

There, when the people incorporated themselves a body politic, they chose him to be their chief ruler, and continued to elect him annually to be their governor for seven successive years.

After this, he seems to have retired from public life, until the year 1678, when he was prevailed upon to take the government, in which year he died, November 1st, aged seventy-eight years. It is a fact worthy of note, that his death occurred one hundred and seventy-seven years ago this day.

Matters at Washington are quiet just now, and since the choice of Speaker, the Government wheels begin to move once more, and the Union still exists. What a lucky dog of burials in the mean time, have been rising three thousand, and at the present time, only about four hundred and fifty graves remain out of this vast number, showing conclusively that some portions of the ground must have been buried over a number of times.

Already has this crowded state caused many of the older graves and stones to be removed, which ought not to have been,—as many of the original families have become extinct, and the only knowledge we have of them are the simple epitaphs recorded upon their tomb stones. It is the duty of every citizen to preserve inviolate these mouldering relics of the past, for

"There are no monuments more interesting than the tombs of men, especially those of our kindred."

The capaciousness of this Cemetery will permit five hundred and seventy-seven lots, the most of which will contain three hundred superficial square feet; the same as those at Mount Auburn and Forest Hills,—each of which are offered at the nominal sum of five dollars; this amount being so small, places them within the means of every individual. Around these lots the avenues for carriages are sixteen feet wide, and the foot-paths five feet, and a border of five feet on all the paths and avenues and between the lots. This gives a proper space for trees and shrubbery, and prevents anything like a crowded appearance. All monies received from the sale of lots, or from any other source, is to be expended in ornamenting and improving this ground.

It is the intention of the Committee to make this truly a Rural Cemetery. What more embellishing and beautiful than a Cemetery of this kind, to become in time a paradise of sculpture, of monuments and mausoleums, interspersed amid nature's loveliest productions. Here the mourner can retire under the Magnolia's sweet shade and amid the fragrance of flowers, pour out the secret affections of the heart, for departed friends.

The Committee offer their sincere thanks to the town for their munificent bequest the past year, hoping it may continue until the Cemetery is completed, that it may be an honor to the living and a proper tribute to the dead.

The following Summons is to be found in the First Volume of the Records of Massachusetts, for the year 1637—8.

THE FORM OF THE SUMMONS OR WARRANTS.

* Whereas you have desired and obtained license to remove yourselves and your families out of this jurisdiction and for that information hath been given to the Court that you intent is only to withdraw yourselves for a season, that you may avoid the censure of the Court in some things which may be objected against you, the Court doth therefore order that you may depart according to the license given you.

* Mount Wollastons—Randall—Henry and John Johnson, Mr. Coddington's men; of Newberry, Mr. Nico; Eaton: of Salem, Francis Weston, Rich'd Waterman, Thom: One, and Stewely Waskote, are to appear also, if they be not removed before the next Court.

* Mr. Willi: Coddington, Mr. John Coggeshall, Goo: William Baulston, Edward Hutchinson, Samuel Wilbore, John Portor, John Compton, Henry Bill, Philip Shearman, Wili: Freeborne and Richard Carter, these having license to dept, summons is to go out to them to appear if they be not gone before at the next Court, the third month, to answer such things as shall be obected.—NERNO.

The agent seems to think that he should have been able to have driven a much more profitable business, if the town agents had complied more generally with the requisitions of the law. This no doubt would have been the case, as some of the larger cities and towns, such as instance, as Boston, Marblehead, Salem, Charlestown, &c., refused to supply their wants at the spiritual reservoir of the State, and the prospect now is, that the speculation of his "Temperance Excellency," for the present year, will prove an entire failure.

Consecration.

The bill has passed the House of Tennessee Legislature authorizing the State to purchase five hundred acres of the ground—including the tomb of Jackson and the buildings of the Hermitage, for fifty thousand dollars. Tennessee ought to own, for all time, the tomb of her most illustrious son, and the beautiful fields he loved so well.

Poetry.

Life is Sweet.

"O, life is sweet!" said a merry child;
"And I love to roam
In the meadows green, 'neath the sky serene;
Oh! the world is a fairy home.
There are trees hung thick with blossoms fair,
And flowers gay and bright;
There's the moon's clear ray, and the sunlit bay,
Oh, the world is a world of light!"

"Oh, life is sweet!" said a gallant youth,
As he conned the storied page;
And he pondered on the days by-gone,
And the fame of a former age.
There was hope in his bright and beaming eye,
And he longed for riper years;
He clung to life—he dared its strife—
He felt, nor dread, nor fears."

"Oh, life is sweet!" came merrily
From the lips of a fair young bride;
And a happy smile she gave the while
To the dear one by her side.
"Oh, life is sweet! for we will live
Our constancy to prove;
They sorrows mine, my trials thine,
Our solace in our love."

"Oh, life is sweet!" said a mother fond,
As she gazed on her helpless child;
And she closer pressed to her gladdest breast
Her babe, who unconsciously smiled.
"My life shall be for thee, my child,
Pure, guiltless, as thou art;
And who shall dare my soul to tear
From the tie that forms a part?"

"Oh, life is sweet!" said an aged sire,
Whose eye was sunk and dim;
His form was bent—his strength was spent—
Could life be sweet to him?
Oh yes; for round the old man's chair
His children's children clung;
And each dear face and warm embrace
Made life seem ever young.

Thus life is sweet, from early youth
To weak, enfeebled age;
Love twines with life, through care and strife,
In every varied stage.
The rough, perchance, the path we tread,
And dark the sky above,
In every state there's something yet
To live for and to love.

What is a Year?

What is a year? "Tis but a wave
On life's dark rolling stream,
Which is so quickly gone that we
Account it but a dream.

"Tis but a single, earnest throb
Of time's old iron heart,
Which throbs now, and strong as when
It first with life did start.

What is a year? "Tis but a turn
Of time's old brass wheel,
Or but a page upon the book
Which death must shortly seal.

"Tis but a step upon the road
Which we must travel o'er;
A few steps more and we shall walk
Life's weary round no more.

Hymn.

There's beauty all around us—
In tree and plant and flower;
It sparkles in the eye of morn,
And gladdens each happy hour.

The clouds, like golden curtains,
Lie folded round the sun;
Prepared upon his azure car
His daily course to run.

The smiling, dancing streamlets,
The whirling, laughing rills,
That spring, all fringed with flowers,
Down from the rugged hills.

The little, merry warblers
That fill the air with song,
The river, that in silence flows
So peacefully along—

All these are decked with beauty;
And o'er the youthful heart,
Ye cast a charm of loveliness,
And holy joy impart.

Good Advice.

If you your lips
Would keep from slips,
Five things observe with care—
Of whom you speak,
To whom you speak,
And who, and when, and where.

Quotations.

A down east shipper, with a boy, was trying to manage a small sloop, when a master of a Liverpool packet, who had been dredging out of the harbor, incensed at theirawkwardness, called out:

"What sloop is that?"
"The Sally, from Maine," cried the Yankee.
"Who commands her?"

"Well," said the Yankee, "I undertook to but I swow she's too much for me."

"Bill, did you ever go to sea?"
I guess I did. Last year for instance, I went to see a red-haired gal; but I only called once."

"Why so?"

"Cause her brother had an unpleasant habit of throwing bootjacks at people."

A runaway thief having applied to a blacksmith for work, the latter showed him some handcuts, and desired to know if he made such kind of work. "Why, yes sir," said the fellow, scratching his pate, "guess I've had a hand in 'em."

A ragged individual was saluted by a little urchin, thus: "I say, you sir, don't you belong to the army?" "No," was the indignant reply. "Well," said the urchin, "I thought you did, as you are out under arms."

An Irishman called in great haste upon Dr. Abernethy, saying that, "Be dad, me boy Tim has swallowed a mouse!" "Then, be dad," said the Doctor, "tell your boy Tim to swallow a cat."

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 23d, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTERS, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

DECLINES. George L. Gill most respects fully informs his fellow citizens, that he declines being considered a candidate for re-election to the offices of Town Clerk, and School Committee.

KEEP COOL.—The Boston Journal seizes upon a jocose paragraph of ours, in the last number of the Patriot, and pretends to be very indignant and talks about the Patriot being in the pay of the Government, and all that. We think the editors must be greatly in want of topics for editorials. The Patriot is a neutral paper and supported by all the best people of Quincy, including Whigs, Democrats, Americans, Republicans and Abolitionists. Our columns are open to free discussion. If you will have it, Messrs editors of the Journal, that we are the organ and mouth-piece of the General Government, we shall beg leave to decline the distinguished honor.

THE ADAMS' LITERARY ASSOCIATION.—We rejoice to hear that this Association is in a flourishing condition. Through the exertions of the late President, Francis M. Johnson, Esq., and a few others, the Society has been rescued from a disgraceful termination. The narrow, local and bigoted spirit which characterized some of its proceedings last year has been exorcised. Under the Presidency of Mr. Barker, and governed by the more generous, liberal and magnanimous sentiments which have brought about the new order of things, there are grounds for hope that this Society may become a permanent Institution, and that our young men will be induced to join it and interest themselves in its exercises.

The Association holds its meetings over the Quincy Bookstore, every Monday evening, in a Hall well adapted to the purpose of discussion and declamation. We are confident it will stand long and that its benefits to our people will multiply year by year. Let every one of our young men who desires to improve his mind, memory, taste, judgment and powers of thought and utterance go and add his name to the list of the members of this Association.

ANNEXATION OF BRAINTREE NECK.—We learn there is a very favorable disposition manifested on the part of some of the leading members of the House and Senate towards the above named project.

The annexation of the Neck would be nothing more nor less than the restoration to Quincy of land and houses and people which belong to her. When the town of Quincy was incorporated, the people of the Neck believed that they had been incorporated into the town of Quincy, and joined our people in celebrating the event with bonfires and illuminations. Not long after, however, the long sombre faced fathers of Braintree, made their appearance at the Neck and laid claim to it, and palmed off upon our unsuspecting people the idea that Ship Cove was that hetty, pety, and fit only for anchorage for boats and ships, which has since been regarded as the boundary line between Braintree and Quincy. All we ask is for the restoration of our land and people. Give us back our own. At present, the land is neglected—ship-builders and boatmen will not build upon it and live in Braintree if they can help it. The people feel no attachment to the villages of Braintree from which they are separated by sterile lands and hills and woods.

SUICIDE AT BRAINTREE.—George L. White, son of Livingston White, Esq., hung himself in his father's barn, on Wednesday morning last. He had recently returned from an Insane Asylum, being very dissatisfied therewith, partially restored, and was fearful he should be carried back, but was assured by his parents he should remain at home, and every endeavor which parental kindness and affection could advance, was made by them to cheer and comfort him in his depressed state of mind, but without avail. He went to the barn on the morning of his death with his father, who left him at work, and returning about an hour afterwards, found him in another part of the barn hanging by a rope, which he immediately cut, but life was extinct. Lewis Bass Esq., of this town, Coronet, was called and held an inquest. The jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the above circumstances.

FROM THE "FAR WEST." We commend to the earnest attention of our readers, the very interesting letter of our young and valued friend which may be found in to-day's paper, on our first page, relative to the really glorious and prosperous condition of the yet almost Western Wilderness. The writer is a "native born" of this town, and well known to many of our readers. He tells but a truthful account of the beauty and advantages of the country, and the happy prospects of the future. We predict for our friend the highest honors in his chosen home, and his native town will hail with pride her yet undistinguished son. Let all read his letter.

ADAMS LITERARY ASSOCIATION. At a recent meeting of this Association the following persons were elected as Officers, viz:

President—Henry Barker.

Vice President—Charles Marsh.

Secretary—Henry F. Barker.

Librarian—Henry G. Wildman.

Treasurer—Jonathan Jameson.

Trustees—Henry Barker, Horace B. Spear, Jonathan Jameson, Wm. S. Underwood and Joseph G. Brackett.

Directors—Charles Marsh, Lysander S. Richards, Francis M. Johnson, Edward Brackett and Jacob F. Eaton.

Mercantile Biography.

According to Hon. Edward Everett, the most brilliant chapter in Macaulay's History of England is the one that he devotes to sketching the industrial, mercantile and agricultural pursuits of the people, during the reign of King Charles the Second. It opens up to the mind of the reader a panorama of the state of the country at that time, the habits and customs of the people and a thousand and one phases of society which enable us to form a correct opinion of the nation's advancement in civilization and refinement. Macaulay, however, was compelled to draw his information from President Tyler, of being the accidental President, when he knows that Mr. Banks was chosen by a legal majority, as decided by a vote of the House. In his run-slavery statements, he loses sight that the majority rules in this country, and that slaves are but "personal property chattels." Let him show his excited fanaticism, but I am rejoiced to know that an American—a mechanic, an honorable citizen of the working class, has been elevated to this proud position, and in the wisdom of the Almighty, he will be our next President. LEON.

need in the present day an impression of some of the sterling principles of business which animated the men whom Mr. Hunt has here presented to our view. To merchants, particularly, these records must be of inestimable value, for they give the experience of men whose careers have shaped, in a great measure, the fortunes of our country. They will also serve as charts to guide the young adventurer upon the turbulent sea of commercial life. Indeed, they are to the merchant, what the records of the physician are to his profession, or what the decisions of the courts are to the lawyer. How could either of the latter professions afford to part with the experience which their brethren before them have collected for their guidance? And we might, with equal propriety, put a similar inquiry to each individual in the mercantile business. How can you afford to dispense with the valuable amount of commercial information which Mr. Hunt has here presented to your view? We doubt if there are many who will, but hundreds and thousands who will be anxious to avail themselves of the opportunity to procure this really elegant and valuable work. Mr. Hunt cultivated this special field of biography in a manner corresponding to the labors of Sparks, in general personal history, and deserves a generous return for his industrious and indefatigable researches.—N. Y. Day Book.

For the Patriot.

Preserve the Union.

MR. EDITOR:—I noticed in your paper of the 9th inst., an article without a signature, (ashamed to own himself,) but headed with the fascinating phrase "Let the Union Slip!" This writer harps about "Negroes," and if we can judge of his zeal he has doubtless set at defiance all the laws of God and morality in respect to the race created in his own image. In speaking of the election of Speaker, he uses the old phrase applied to President Tyler, of being the accidental President, when he knows that Mr. Banks was chosen by a legal majority, as decided by a vote of the House. In his run-slavery statements, he loses sight that the majority rules in this country, and that slaves are but "personal property chattels." Let him show his excited fanaticism, but I am rejoiced to know that an American—a mechanic, an honorable citizen of the working class, has been elevated to this proud position, and in the wisdom of the Almighty, he will be our next President. ### Boston Correspondence.

Correspondence—European News—Washington Matters—General Wilson in hostile array—Massachusetts Legislature—Proposed Constitutional Amendments—Rail-Road Fares—Banks, &c.

MR. EDITOR:—The signature of "Nemo," in my last week's letter was a typographical error of the "Patriot," it should have been "Nemo."

European news has been received the present week, to Feb. 2d., which is highly interesting. The dispatches of the Russian Government, completing and confirming the telegraphic announcement of the unconditional acceptance of Austria's propositions were received at Vienna on the 23d ult., and couriers immediately conveyed them to Paris and London. A memorandum embodying the proposition has been signed at Vienna, sent to Paris and London, and it is said a Congress will meet at Paris, Feb. 17th, and the whole matter, if possible, speedily brought to a conclusion by the Plenipotentiaries representing England, Austria, Russia and Turkey. The Russians are delighted that their city is selected as the place of Congress. Gaiety and balls reigns in their midst, and peace is regarded as certain. The news has already had an healthy effect upon business and the decline of breadstuffs.

Gen. Wilson's speech in the U. S. Senate, of Monday and Tuesday last, has excited intense interest at Washington, and strong, bitter hostility on the part of Southern men.

It was made in executive session pending Shannon's nomination for Governor of Kansas, which was afterwards confirmed by a strict party vote. Perhaps a more bold, rabid speech was never before made in that dignified body, the National Senate, and Wilson's resort to personalities, are any thing but discreet and commendable in a Parliamentary body.

General Wilson, thoroughly dissected the character of Governor Shannon; saying, among other hard things, that he was the companion of gamblers and drunkards in California, and that when the Missourians shot down a citizen of Kansas, the Governor was so intoxicated that he could not attend to his duty. He could prove these and a hundred other disreputable things of Governor Shannon! He accused Atchison as the moving spirit of all the Missouri excitement; entering Kansas armed with bowie-knife and revolver, ready to shed the blood of any man who would not do his bidding. Look out for pistols and coffee at Washington before long.

Mr. Banks has given a large sprinkling of the standing committee influence of the House to the Massachusetts delegation. He has placed Mr. Damrell on the Joint Committee of Engraving; quoted in debate some time since, as one where the "pickings" were profitable. Mr. Comens is appropriately placed on the Committee of Commerce; he partly represents the city of Boston. Mr. Barlingame on Foreign Affairs and Mr. Hall of the Militia. I will keep you advised of the doings of our State Legislature.

The proposed amendments of the Constitution, that no person shall vote or hold office unless he can write his name and read;

also, that no foreigner shall be qualified to vote, unless he has been in the United States twenty-one years, are both likely to pass, so far as this legislature has the power.

I have my doubts whether the Personal Liberty Act of the last session will be repealed. It is clearly unconstitutional and the sooner it is expunged from the State books the better. On Wednesday last, Mr. Baxter, of Quincy, offered an order as to requiring all Railroad Companies to give six months notice at least, before raising the price of passengers fares on their roads. The order was negatived. There is great doubt whether any new Bank charters will be created, or even Bank capital increased in any way the present session. The Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company have petitioned for an amendment of their charter, so that they can insure on the stock principle (where no note is given and no premium returned) as well as the Mutual system, now in most successful operation.

The Hoosac Tunnel matter is now again in the hands of a Joint Special Committee.

Another resolve for amendment to the Constitution, providing that no person shall hold office unless he is native born, or the child of

American parents, born during their temporary absence, was agreed to, in the Senate, on Monday last, without discussion—17 to 6, and sent to the House. NEMO.

For the Patriot.

Mr. EDITOR.—It was my impression at the last annual Town Meeting, that the change of time for auditing the accounts from February to January, was for the purpose of bringing the subject more fully before the Town for their consideration. And as the Annual Town Meeting is close at hand, and the Auditors having had time to prepare their accounts, we would ask where is this Report? Bring it forward gentlemen, and let us have it, we should like to examine the wise expenditures of the Town's money for the past year. ONE OF THE ANXIOUS.

CLAM CHOWDER. The Proprietor of the Granite Saloon, wishes to be remembered to his friends, and remind them that he will be happy to meet them on this day, either in the afternoon or evening.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The Springfield (Mass.) Republican states that at the late sitting of the court at Berkshire, Hon. Julian Rockwell came out against the constitutionality of the liquor law in this State.

The Mississippi River is closed for navigation its entire length, a circumstance unprecedented in the memory of any person living.

Fifty person lost their lives by falling through holes in the streets of San Francisco during the last year.

Within a few years no less than seven representatives of foreign governments have married American ladies.

On the western waters, during the last year there were one hundred and eleven steamboats destroyed—sixty snuffed, thirty burned, thirteen collisions, and eight explosions— involving the loss of 109 lives, and property to the amount of $2,570,100.

In point of numbers, the farmers of Maine eclipse either of the New England States—numbering 77,016, while New Hampshire has but 47,881; Vermont, 48,312; Massachusetts, 55,082; Rhode Island 33,838; Connecticut, 31,756.

Buttons, rivaling jet in beauty of gloss and finish, are now made from India rubber. The United States navy and several large clothing houses have adopted the new style.

Gen. Wilson, well known as the editor of the Merchants' Magazine, must belong to the family of first conceiving and executing an extended plan for giving the lives of merchants to kings and princes the power of their thrones. Carthage rose under the inspiration of mercantile enterprise. England owes her supremacy in the East Indies to the daring ambition of Portuguese merchants, while our own country is but another of the many instances that might be cited of the achievements which have been made in the pursuit of commercial interests.

To Freeman Hunt, well known as the editor of the Merchants' Magazine, must belong to the family of first conceiving and executing an extended plan for giving the lives of merchants to kings and princes the power of their thrones. Carthage rose under the inspiration of mercantile enterprise. England owes her supremacy in the East Indies to the daring ambition of Portuguese merchants, while our own country is but another of the many instances that might be cited of the achievements which have been made in the pursuit of commercial interests.

Five person lost their lives by falling through holes in the streets of San Francisco during the last year.

Within a few years no less than seven representatives of foreign governments have married American ladies.

On the western waters, during the last year there were one hundred and eleven steamboats destroyed—sixty snuffed, thirty burned, thirteen collisions, and eight explosions— involving the loss of 109 lives, and property to the amount of $2,570,100.

In point of numbers, the farmers of Maine

eclipse either of the New England States—

numbering 77,016, while New Hampshire has but 47,881; Vermont, 48,312; Massachusetts, 55,082; Rhode Island 33,838; Connecticut, 31,756.

Buttons, rivaling jet in beauty of gloss and finish, are now made from India rubber. The United States navy and several large clothing houses have adopted the new style.

For the Patriot.

Mr. EDITOR.—The signature of "Nemo," in my last week's letter was a typographical error of the "Patriot," it should have been "Nemo."

European news has been received the present week, to Feb. 2d., which is highly interesting. The dispatches of the Russian Government, completing and confirming the telegraphic announcement of the unconditional acceptance of Austria's propositions were received at Vienna on the 23d ult., and couriers immediately conveyed them to Paris and London. A memorandum embodying the proposition has been signed at Vienna, sent to Paris and London, and it is said a Congress will meet at Paris, Feb. 17th, and the whole matter, if possible, speedily brought to a conclusion by the Plenipotentiaries representing England, Austria, Russia and Turkey. The Russians are delighted that their city is selected as the place of Congress.

Gaiety and balls reigns in their midst, and peace is regarded as certain. The news has already had an healthy effect upon business and the decline of breadstuffs.

Poetry.

God Help the Poor

Darkly the winter day
Dawns on the moor,
How can the heart be gay—
Who can endure?

See the sad, weary wight,
Wanders from noon to night,
Shelterless! homeless quite!
God help the poor!

Now the red robin, here
Sits on the sill,
Not e'er a grain of here
Touches his bill;

So with the houseless poor,
Wand'ring from door to door,
Seeking a morsel more—
Lord 'tis thy will.

White is the virgin snow,
Bitter the morn,
See those starved children go,
Wretched, forlorn!

Feet with shoe or hose,
Backs without shelt'ring clothes,
Strangers to calm repose,
Why were they born?

See that lone, aged man,
Snow-white his hair;
Mark his sad visage wan,
Deep his despair;

Carving the rich man's food,
Owners of many a road,
Lord, thou art always good,
Hear his heart's prayer.

Yonder a woman goes,
Ragged and old,
Barefooted o'er the snow,
Famished and cold;

How thy poor children cling
To her side shivering,
Chickens beneath her wing
Doth she enfold!

First falls the sleet and rain,
Slowly they go,
By frost side, sheltered plain,
Wailing their woe;

City street now they see,
Here they roam wild and free,
Are they not flesh as we—
Can't thou say, "no?"

Night spreads her sable wing,
Where can they lie?
Sorrow like their's must bring
Tears to the eye;

Fall the cloud torrent falls,
Down they must lie in bails,
Each to his Maker calls,
Lord! let me die!

Ye whom the heavens bless,
Give from the store;
'Twill ne'er make your treasures less,
Must make them more;

For he that gives cheerfully,
God loves so tenderly,
Give to him! pray with me,
God help the poor!

Past, Present and Future.

I can see that I grow older,
And note it day by day!
I can feel my heart grow colder
And its pulses cease away.

At the tell-tale glass I linger,
As with faded eye I trace
Sennet tokens which Time's finger
Has engraven on my face.

But one moment can restore me
To my boyhood and my prime,
And sweet memories come o'er me
Of that brief and blessed time;

Then I hear a father's blessing,
And I feel a mother's kiss;

And again I am caressing
One who shared with me my bliss.

Who shall say the Past much perish
'Neath the Future's coming waves?

What the soul delights to cherish!

From Oblivion's depth it saves!

Looking backward, on I'm gidding,

Till I reach the final shore

Where the Present is fading,

And where Change shall come no more.

Anecdotes.

"Pap, I planted some potatoes in our garden," said one of the smart youths of this generation to his father, "and what do you think came up?"

"Why, potatoes, of course."

"No, sir-e'e! There came up a drove of hogs and eat them all!" The "old man" grins.

A young man at a tea party overheard one lady say to another:

"I have something for your private ear," and immediately exclaimed:

"I protest against it, for privateering is illegal."

A gentleman having occasion to call on a writer, found him busy in his garret. "Why, how hot you have it here," said he, "it is as hot as an oven."

"And so it ought to be," was the reply, "for it is here I make my bread."

A country-man was induced to make his first visit to the Theatre, and after the performance was over, was asked how he was pleased with it.

"Wal," said he, "I liked the pictures (meaning the scenery,) purty well, but them play fel-lers talked too much."

A tutor of a college, lecturing a young man on his irregular habits, added, with great pathos: "Your conduct will bring your father's gray hairs with sorrow to the grave!"

"That is impossible," replied the youth, "my father wears a cauliflower wig!"

On board the Cunard steamers the Church service is read every Sunday morning. The muster roll of the crew is called over and they attend service. A gentleman, one day, said to one of the sailors;

"Are you not going to attend public worship?"

"Not exactly, sir," replied Jack, "but we should lose our grog if we didn't."

W. STONE'S VEGETABLE LIQUID CATHARTIC

AND FAMILY PHYSIC:

The most important discovery ever made in Medical Science, being a compound of Seeds and Roots which form the most powerful, and agreeable physic ever offered to the public. The necessity of such a medicine has long been felt both by the heads of families and physicians. Its advantages over cathartics given in the form of Pills or Powders, must be obvious to every intelligent person. It operates more immediately & effectually upon the system, and at the same time is infinitely milder than any other. It not only produces its effects where physic is required, but completely relieves costiveness, leaving the bowels perfectly free. It expels all humors from the stool, is a certain cure for piles, regulates the action of the liver, frees the stomach from bilges, invigorates the whole system, and removes the cause of all local pains such as

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, TIC DOULOUREUX, GOUT, Pain in the Head, Side, Stomach, &c. &c.

It may also be relied upon in all diseases of the bowels—DYSENTERY, DIARRHEA AND COLERA MORBUS, yield at once to its magical influence. Again we repeat, TRY IT—it needs no other recommendation. No family will be without it after they have properly tested its merits. Reader, if you have tried other remedies without success, despair not—relief is at hand. Are you suffering from Scrofula, six bottles of my Liquid Cathartic will do you good. Would be relieved from intestinal costiveness, three bottles will effect all your desire. If you are afflicted with Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or other local pains, six bottles will free you from them, humors will be eradicated from the blood by one or two to six bottles. In short, if you require a physic for any purpose, this is the most reliable, safe, and agreeable to the taste that has ever been placed within the reach of the public.

He saw a small, efficient engine driving four saws, fed by four men, while there stood at the desk hard by, one evidently the manager of the establishment.

Hiram felt a strong interest in what he saw; there were large piles of excellent lumber in the building, an article he was familiar with from his childhood, and he watched the process of sawing it up, carefully observing to what purpose the wood was put, and saw a couple of hands in a farther part of the shop engaged in dove-tailing the pieces together, and forming the lumber into boxes of various sizes. He consumed so much time, and was so minute in his observation, that at last the proprietor came up to him and addressed him pleasantly:

'You seem to be quite interested?' he remarked to Hiram.

'Yes. I have seen a good deal of lumber in my day, and I was calculating how much you probably used up in this way.'

'We use a good many thousand feet every week.'

'So I should think, and best number ones, too.'

'Yes, we require the very best of stock, and lumber is up now.'

'How much do you pay?'

'Twenty-four dollars a thousand, all clear and assorted.'

'What do you do with all these boxes?' continued Hiram.

'O, we can sell them faster than we can make them, for packing soap, chemicals, &c.'

'Rather heavy for that purpose, I should say,' added Hiram.

'Well, they are rather heavy, but we can't get boards sawed any different, they are down to the lowest gauge of the lumbering mills.'

Hiram looked thoughtful, handled the boxes, examined the saws, talked good common sense in business to the man, and at last he said, half seriously, half in a jest:

'You don't want a partner, do you?'

'Why, no, not exactly; though if I had one who would put in a couple of thousand dollars, and would take hold heartily himself, I would mind sharing the thing with him and throwing in the machinery.'

'I haven't got any money,' said Hiram; 'but I will give you an idea about this matter, and will take hold and give time, in a way that I think will be worth as much as the sum you name, in a short time, provided you will give me half the business.'

'I like the way you talk,' said the man, honestly; but this is an odd proposition!'

'You say you pay twenty-four dollars a thousand for the boards?'

'Yes.'

'Supposing I bring them down to twelve at once, and make neater and better boxes for your purpose?'

'If you can do that, I will share with you at once, for my fortune would be made.'

'Will you give me a chance to try the thing after my own fancy, for one day, say, commencing to-morrow morning?'

'Yes,' said the man, after a moment's hesitation. 'I can see no harm, though I am to be away to-morrow forenoon.'

After a little longer talk, and a careful understanding that there should be no experiment tried that should risk the machinery, Mr. Hard, the box maker, gave orders to his people that Mr. Veazie was to be obeyed on the following forenoon, the same as though he were himself to give the orders, and that he should return at noon.

Hiram at once took off his coat, measured in the arms of the saws and asked if it was the largest!

—He was told that it was; this he was at first sorry for, but still carefully taking his measurements upon a piece of paper, he soon disappeared. He remembered a hardware store not far distant, which he had passed that very afternoon; to this he repaired, and selected a circular saw, twice as large as any Mr. Hard had in his shop, and of different make in the teeth; he also got some braces and bolts of a size and style which he appeared to understand, and telling the store-keeper that he wanted them for Mr. Hard in the next street, he found no difficulty in getting them, but he was daily growing more and more conversant with city life and ways, and he wrote every few days to Lucy a digest of observations and fortunes. A fortnight or three weeks in Boston made fearful intrusions into his slender purse, and at the suggestion of some new acquaintances he determined to go to New York.

Here he passed some two weeks with various adventures, but without finding an hour of paying occupation. He wandered everywhere, observing and searching out places, inquiring freely of all, until at the close of the third week, he had but a single dollar left in his pocket, and felt for the first time nearly disheartened. In this mood he strolled through one of the up town cross streets, above Union Park, and found his attention attracted by the operation of a steam saw-mill, which he entered and quietly watched the business of. He saw a small, efficient engine driving four saws, fed by four men,

already were a score of boxes and more manufactured of the new thickness, and they were actually more valuable, as the thickness was ample for all purposes of strength, and the weight was reduced one half. He was also delighted at his new acquaintance, who took hold of his work so handily, and above all he felt that he had at once given him an idea worth half the business or more. Mr. Hard was an honest and faithful man, and unhesitatingly kept his promise, installing Hiram in the business with one half the profits.

The reader may imagine the letter which Hiram wrote to his faithful Lucy, and how she encouraged him in return, and the business proved exceedingly prosperous, and how it was enlarged, Hiram found himself, at the end of a twelve month worth some two thousand dollars; and how Squire White pressed his hand warmly when he returned to ask for Lucy, and told him to "take her," and Lucy, blushing, laid her fair cheek bathed with happy tears upon his shoulder, and her kind old mother said that she had but one regret, that was to part with Lucy, "who must now go away to live in New York State."

But all this was so, and Lucy and Hiram were married, and their friends declared that Heaven made the match and worked a miracle for Hiram Veazie, who was so good, and industrious, and generous spirited. But these are not the days of miracles, and the reader knows very well that it was brought about by the most natural agencies.

Three years only have passed since Hiram was married, as we have related in this veritable story, and on the Bloomingdale road, not a long walk from the large factory of Hurd and Veazie, lives Hiram and his lovely companion. The large and pleasant house in which they reside is his own, and a handsome surplus besides. Each annual Christmas they return to their childhood's home, and Lucy thinks the journey is healthy for little Hiram.

The house to live in may be fairly thrown into the bargain. The whole together is, perhaps, one of the least eligible places of permanent in Britain.

Lives of American Merchants.

It is something to achieve anything new in these days—it is more to combine novelty with utility. Laden, as our table generally is, with books of all kinds, we seldom expect to draw from the heap one which "the world will not willingly let die." Yet, now and then there turns up a volume upon whose title-page the broad seal of durability is set. Such a one is now before us.

It is the first volume of the lives of American Merchants, edited by Freeman Hunt, the well known editor of the Merchant's Magazine.

—a serial unique of its kind, for we cannot consider any magazine or review to be a thoroughly mercantile organ that devotes a portion of its pages to miscellaneous literature. Any such work is always looked on with suspicion by the shrewd merchant, who rightly calculates that light literature is not exactly the thing to be along side of stern statistics, at least on his counting-room desk. Mr. Hunt made mercantile literature specialite, and though at first, many smiled incredulously at his attempt to become the Christopher-North of Commerce, in this year of grace one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six, thirty-four volumes of his Merchants' Magazine attest to his industry, his talents and his success.

Therefore, may Freeman Hunt be truly said to be the founder of mercantile and commercial literature. He breathed, or his pen did, on the dry bones of trade—only dry be it remembered, so far as regarded letters—and straightway they became clothed with life and vitality. He inaugurated a school of his own, and may now fairly take rank with the original minded men of his age. To him the merchants of America, the young merchants, especially owe a deep debt of obligation—one which we are certain they will acknowledge, and which, indeed, they have acknowledged, inasmuch as from Eastport, in Maine, to New Orleans (to say nothing of the foreign parts) there is scarcely a counting-house desk on which the Merchants' Magazine's brown covers are not to be seen, or its pages laid open as a work of reference.

And now we have Freeman Hunt in, as we of the press say, a "new dress. Before us lies a goodly octavo of some 600 pages, which contains the lives of twenty-one eminent American merchants, and finely engraved portraits of nine of them. It was scarcely to have been expected that Mr. Hunt's own pen—busy as it is—should have been able to chronicle the careers of all those merchant princes; therefore, he has availed himself of the eminent literary abilities of such men as Edward Everett, Charles King, Thos. G. Carey, S. Austin Alibone, John L. Blake, D. D., and others. In this he has done wisely, inasmuch as all sameness of treatment is avoided, and amongst such a multitude of biographies there must be truth and wisdom.

What Bancroft and Macaulay have done for American and English literature generally, Mr. Freeman Hunt has done and is doing for American commercial literature particularly; and in a country like ours such an undertaking cannot fail to lead to results of the very highest importance. It is too much the fashion in Europe for the scions of aristocracy to turn up their noses at the merchant—but with Old World prejudices, thank God, America has nothing to do. Her commerce stands upon her own solid pedestal, and asserts its true dignity. We honor those who have been the builders of their own fortunes, and consider that the man who by his own unaided efforts built for himself a high position among his brother merchants, is a far greater hero than a Raglan or a Pelsier. Tell us of the struggles, hopes, and final successes of such men in America has been Mr. Hunt's aim, and the execution of his purpose is in all respects worthy of it.

We venture to predict that there is not a merchant in the United States who will not possess himself of this most interesting volume, which will become, and in truth is part and parcel of, the history of our country—for to whom does it owe its greatness if not mainly to its merchants? To those who have laid aside the ledger as well as to those who are making their first entries therein, it will be interesting. The retired millionaire will peruse it, because it tells of trials he has passed; the young clerk will read it and be encouraged to follow in the footsteps of those who have "achieved greatness," while the general reader will find exemplified in its histories of toils and triumphs, the fact that "Truth is stranger than fiction." All that remains for us to say is, that the volume is beautifully printed, and that the portraits are faithful and finely executed.

The farm stock of Ireland has increased during the last fourteen years from twenty-two to thirty-five million pounds sterling.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 1st, 1856.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

FIRE. On Sunday evening last, the establishment of Mr. Charles Holmes was discovered to be on fire about half past nine o'clock, and before the flames were arrested, the building, in which was his shop, was entirely destroyed—and the adjoining house seriously injured. To the exertions of the Firemen of this town, a serious loss of property was stayed; and considering the disadvantages under which they had to labor, from a scarcity of water, and the frozen condition of the pumps and reservoirs, too much praise cannot be awarded for their ultimate success in subduing its farther ravages; the town should not be unmindful of their claims, but should be liberal in their appropriations to all their required wants.

The building occupied by Charles Holmes, was insured at Dedham for seven hundred dollars, and at Quincy, for two hundred dollars, a total loss. The dwelling house of the late Mr. Copeland was insured at Dedham for eight hundred dollars, less small. Mr. Holmes' stock was saved in a damaged state; his loss is covered by insurance. The fire was probably caused by spontaneous combustion.

Citizen's Grand Rally.

On Thursday evening last, a large and enthusiastic meeting of the Citizens of this town was held in the Lyceum Room to nominate a board of Municipal officers.

Captain Noah Cummings was chosen Moderator of the Meeting, and George Baxter, Esq. Secretary.

The following list of candidates were unanimously adopted.

For Moderator: Wm. B. Duggan.

Clerk: William F. Whitney.

Town Treasurer: William S. Morton.

Selectmen: Daniel Baxter, Thompson Baxter, Edmund B. Taylor.

School Committee: Charles F. Adams, William S. Morton, Rev. Nelson Clark, George White, Horatio N. Glover, William B. Duggan, Joseph S. Beal.

Constables: Albion Dearborn, William Walker, Frederick F. Trask.

The following gentlemen were chosen as a Rallied Committee.

Jonathan Jameson, J. F. Billings, Albion Dearborn, James Burke, Horatio D. Wildman, George Cahill, Joseph W. Robertson, Richard McDonald, Frederick F. Trask, D. D. Ring, John I. Glover, George White, Charles Taylor, Luke Rideout, Thomas Lund.

LAST ASSEMBLY OF THE HANCOCK LIGHT GUARDS. The last of the glorious assemblies will take place on Friday, March 14th. We can safely say they are the best the town has afforded for years.

Our correspondent "Nemo," will excuse us for the non-appearance of his article this week—which was unavoidably crowded out; it will be attended to in our next.

GRAND BALL. On the 4th of March, there is to be a glorious time at the Town Hall in connection by a bridge with the Hancock House. As this will be doubtless the last one of the season, all admirers of this truly beautiful exercise should avail themselves of this favorable opportunity. The music will be of first order—the arrangements will vie with all former preparations—and we predict for the party the most brilliant of the season.

The supper will be served by the proprietor of the Hancock House, who has proved himself equal to the best of caterers, and we have ample proof that all will be done in recherche style.

Admittance to the gallery of the Town Hall, we learn, twenty-five cents.

A grand time awaits all, and the lovers of rational enjoyment should be on hand.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE. This body has now been in session two months, but no business of any importance has been accomplished. We hope with the return of spring and more genial weather, they will take up the affairs of the people in earnest.

For the Patriot.

The Auditor's Report

The Auditor's Report has been kept back until the last moment, and notwithstanding their request at the Town Meeting last year to have the Auditor's Report reasonably published before the annual March Meeting of this year, the citizens will have to vote on Monday next on matters which they will not have time fully to consider.

Secrecy may be an excellent thing as a party arrangement, especially if men have any selfish objects to gain; but in town matters there should be no secrecy. Tax payers ought to know for what they are called upon to pay taxes. Does any man believe that the Auditor's Report would have been kept back had the finances of the town been in a sound and healthy condition?

The Town debt was larger at the beginning of last year and is many thousand dollars larger this. Do the citizens desire to augment this debt? If so, let the municipal affairs of the town be directed by the same party next year which at the last annual town meeting elected the present board of own officers.

A GRAND CHANCE. We wish to call the attention of the ladies to the advertisement in another column of Dry Goods at auction. Our friend Savil, being determined to give up that branch of business, takes this method of clearing out his entire stock. Give him a call and secure some of the bargains.

REAL ESTATE NOTICE. We would call attention to the advertisement of J. W. Maynard, 8 Congress Street, Boston, in to-day's paper. Mr. Maynard has been engaged in the building, in which was his shop, was entirely destroyed—and the adjoining house seriously injured. To the exertions of the Firemen of this town, a serious loss of property was stayed; and considering the disadvantages under which they had to labor, from a scarcity of water, and the frozen condition of the pumps and reservoirs, too much praise cannot be awarded for their ultimate success in subduing its farther ravages; the town should not be unmindful of their claims, but should be liberal in their appropriations to all their required wants.

ASSEMBLY AT FRANKLIN HALL. The attention of the reader is directed to the notice of this Assembly in another column of our paper. For those who take pleasure in this innocent and healthy amusement we would bespeak a friendly word.

Foreign Correspondence.

LETTER VIII.

PARIS, MONDAY MORNING, 3 Feb. 4, 1856.

If I were now in Quincy, my dear A., nothing would induce me to put pen to paper on Monday, from time out of mind the person's holiday. But here, having nothing to do on Sundays, except to attend upon the services of the Church, I can, without fatigue or disgust, indite a few pages to my long neglected correspondent. Do not imagine you have been forgotten. But I will not waste words in excuses.

So many things have passed under my observation since you last heard from me that I hardly know where to begin. Perhaps a resume of our journeying and sight-seeing would be both more interesting and intelligible. Well then, two weeks ago this day, we left the fog and smoke of London, in hopes of speedily emerging into daylight, but the shades of evening descended upon us ere many miles were accomplished, and we entered Holkstone under cover of night. We found comfortable quarters in the Pavilion, the only hotel possessing any pretensions to style which we had hitherto seen in England.

At nine in the morning, in a dismal drizzle of rain we went on board of a cockle-shell steamer, not much, if any, larger than the vessels which lie at Quincy Point.

In two hours and five minutes we were landed at Boulogne. The coast of France at this point is quite tame, by no means justifying to an American eye the Frenchman's darling epithet, la Belle France. Some one has said, that being not particularly alive to the beauties of nature, they mean no more by this phrase than what is presented in a well cultivated country. In this sense, la Belle France is worthy of the name. Our ride from Boulogne to Paris was through well tilled fields of the usual cereals, the country, excepting a short distance in the valley of the Oise, was barren of all beauty.

The chief objects of interest in Boulogne are the crypt of the old Cathedral, which has been lately restored, the Museum, the house where Le Sage, the author of Gil Blas, ended his days, the column of Napoleon, and a large camp of soldiers living in rude barracks. We would have passed them all by without a look in our haste to reach Paris. But the fates had ordered otherwise. Whilst snatching a hasty dinner preparatory to undertaking a long ride to Amiens, the train, which should have borne us, was on its way. When we made our appearance at the door of the station-house, and essayed to enter, our attempt was repulsed by a fiery little official from within who shook his head fiercely, exclaiming—"Trop tard! trop tard!" Finding ourselves too late for the train, we resolved to make good use of the disappointment in a survey of the town. Although we enjoyed the few hours devoted to this purpose, I doubt whether the account would much interest you.

At 4 o'clock P.M., we departed for Amiens. Had you seen the miserable straggling villages we passed through, you would have blessed God, as we did, that you live in a land where the whole face is dotted with thriving villages and beautiful towns. Such miserable, low, thatched cottages, such squalid poverty, such filthy stable-yards and alleys, such a forlorn air hanging over everything! God be thanked an idolatrous religion, and a despotic government curse not with their blighting presence our own fair land. Long may the Gospel and Liberty, Mother and Daughter shed their benign influence over thee, beloved country!

The Hotel du Blane at Amiens was our home for the night. When the fatigues of the day are over, a cheerful fire, a quiet meal, reading of God's Holy Word, and social converse in which the last impressions are discussed, and absent friends remembered, speedily convert the inn into temporary home. Speaking of fire, what a comical mode of kindling it we witnessed for the first time at Amiens! A fat, and by no means graceful, French girl, with eyes staring and mouth open, rolled or rather bounced into the room, with something in her hand that looked marvelously like a wasp's nest to my unaccustomed eyes. This she lit with a match, placed it under the wood, and withdrew, and I assure you in a few moments we were enjoying a comfortable blaze. Our subsequent experience leads us to suspect the supposed wasp's nest was a pine burl—an old friend of mine in the sunny South. These pommes, or pin, as the French call them, are extensively used in Paris for kindling fires. I throw out the hint in case any adventurous seaman of Quincy Point should feel disposed to embark with a ship load of them for this market. He will find them in great plenty about Hanover, and in still greater abundance near the mouth of old Tar River. A word to the wise!

How shall I find language to describe to you that architectural wonder, the Cathedral of Amiens. The interior of Westminster Abbey fills the soul with awe, and disposes to the worship of Him, who indeed dwellest not in temples made with hands, but yet has been pleased to bless and sanctify places set apart to his use. The exterior of the Amiens Cathedral possesses the mind with wonder and admiration: the interior is very disappointing. Over and around the three front portals, angels, apostles, bishops, martyrs, and holy virgins carved in solid stone, look down upon the beholder. The history they represent, and the wonderfully varied expression of their faces would afford profitable amusement for many an hour. Whatever else may be said of the church builders of the 13th and 14th centuries we must allow that they followed the example of David in not offering to God that which cost them nothing. Years of patient labor and vast sums of money, are in those beautiful portals alone.

In the tower of the Cathedral, in a miniature room, we were shown the stone table at which Henry IV. breakfasted whilst he watched the retreat of the Spaniards from whom he had wrested the city, which they had surprised some months before. In the Hotel de Ville the famous treaty of Amiens, A. D. 1802 was concluded. In the yard of the Cathedral is a statue of Peter the Hermit, at whose preaching the first of those Crusades was undertaken, wherein as one has expressed it, "Europe precipitated herself upon Asia," and was aroused by the shock into the life and activity of modern civilization. But enough for the present.

Yours, &c. B.

READ! READ!! READ!!

The expenses of the town have been somewhat larger than was anticipated, no division having been made for several large counts which the Selectmen believed it to their duty to expend."

The foregoing is an extract from the editor's Report. Is this true? One can hardly believe it. How the Selectmen of town have authority to expend the people's money, without being authorized to do by the people themselves in town meeting, so, to what amount? What is the limitation of their power to expend money in cases where the town have made no provision? In the Selectmen put their hand into the treasury of the town and expend as much money as they please? The Selectmen have such power—and if they have expended town's money without authority from the citizens, they have violated their trust, gone beyond the pale of the law, and should be held to a strict accountability.

Poetry.

Boldly Battle for the Right

Yes, boldly battle for the right,
Where'er thy lot is cast—
Wage ceaseless war 'gainst lawless might,
Nor think the conflict past;
Dream not, but work, be bold and brave—
Gird on truth's armor strong—
Oh! never bow a willing slave,
To sordid thrones of wrong.

Think not thy share of strife too great
In life's broad field of toil;
But hasten to thy task elate—
They sweet duty's call;
And with a fearless heart perform
The part assigned them well—
And nobly rude error's storm,
And wrongs unnumbered quell.

Strive on! strive on' oh never deem Thy toil and labor done,
'Tis truth in every breast shall gleam,
And warmth of soul be won;
Till right shall triumph over might—
Till reigns immortal truth—
And earth now wrapped in mortal night,
Assumes unfading youth.

Yes, dare encounter common ill—
Unwelcome truth proclaim,
With all thy strength, might, power and will,
The right, of strive maintain;
And dare perform what conscience tells,
Unmindful of thy foes—
Though friendship frowns and love rebels,
And countless worlds oppose.

The Crown of Thorns.

Night has shut the prisoner in,
Night of horrors, night of sin:
Vain for light my eye-balls roll,
Darkly here I dwell in dole;
On my couch I pine and mourn,
Bleeding with the twisted thorn.

What arises dread and still?
O 'tis Calvary's awful hill!
The drooping sufferer there!
O the unpealing prayer!
O the temples gashed and torn
Bleeding with the twisted thorn!

What arises dread and still?
Lo, Ascension's holy hill!
See, the rifted clouds retire,
Flaming with the fleecy fire!
Through them see a form upborne,
His who wore the twisted thorn!

What is that I see afar?
'Tis the blinking of a star;
'Tis Orion 'tis the Sun!
'Tis the Conqueror coming on!
Riding through the gates of morn,
He who wore the twisted thorn!

Turn to Calvary's awful hill,
Ye who tread the paths of ill!
Turn ye towards Ascension mount,
Ye who drink the bitter fount!
Turn ye towards the gates of morn,
Ye who wear the twisted thorn!

Cometh a Blessing Down.
Not to the man of dollars,
Not to the man of deeds,
Not to the man of cunning,
Not to the man of creeds,
Not to the one whose passion
Is for a world's renown,
Not in form of fashion,
Cometh a blessing down.

Not unto land's expansion,
Not to the miser's chest,
Not to the princely mansion,
Not to the blazoned crest,
Not to the sordid worldling,
Not to the knavish clown,
Not to the haughty tyrant,
Cometh a blessing down.

Not to the fully blinded,
Not to the steeped in shame,
Not to the carnal-minded,
Not in unduly fame;
Not in neglect of duty,
Not in the monarch's crown,
Not at the smile of beauty,
Cometh a blessing down.

But to the one whose spirit,
Yearns for the great and good;
Unto the one whose storehouse
Yieldeth the hungry food;
Unto the one who labors,
Fearless of frown or frown;
Unto the kindly hearted,
Cometh a blessing down.

Anecdotes.

A country school master happening to be reading of a curious skin of an elephant, asked one of his pupils if he ever saw an elephant's skin.

"Yes, sir, I have," shouted a little six year old.

"Where?" asked the teacher quite amused at the little boy's earnestness.

"On the elephant," replied the youngster.

At a party the conversation turned, as it naturally does among young folks, on marriage. "One of the belles, addressing a beau, quite unconsciously, (as she explained) said: 'If I were you, and you me, I should have been married long ago.'

A man who wanted to buy a horse, asked a friend how to tell a horse's age. "By the teeth," was the reply. The next day the man went to a horse-dealer, who showed a splendid black horse. The horse-dealer opened the animal's mouth, gave one glance and turned on his heel.

"I don't want him," said he; "he's thirty-two years old." He had counted the teeth.

A gallant sitting by the side of his beloved, and being unable to think of anything else to say, asked her why she was like a tailor.

"I don't know," said she, with pouting lip, "unless because I'm sitting beside a goose."

"Grandma," said a little urchin, "your specs are upside down. Do you wear them thus to see?" "No, my dear," was the reply I wear them so to see."

Try it! Try it! Try it!

G. W. STONE'S VEGETABLE
LIQUID CATHARTICAND
FAMILY PHYSIC:

The most important discovery ever made in Medical Science, being a compound of Bark and Roots which form the most powerful, safe, and agreeable physic ever offered to the public. It has been used in every country in Europe, and has long been felt to be the bane of families and physicians. Its advantages over cathartics given in the form of Pills or Powders, must be obvious to every intelligent person. It operates more immediately and effectually upon the system, and at the same time is infinitely less difficult to administer, being quite agreeable to the taste. It not only proclaims all the effects where physic is required, but completely habitual costiveness, leaving the bowels perfectly free. It expels all humors from the blood, is a certain cure for piles, regulates the action of the liver, frees the stomach from bilious, invigorate the whole system, and removes the cause of all local pains such as

Rheumatism, Neuralgia,

TIC DOULOUREUX, GOUT,

Pain in the Head, Side,

Stomach, &amp;c. &amp;c.

It may also be relied upon in all diseases of the Bowels—DYSENTERY, DIARRHEA AND CHOLERA MORBIS, yield at once to its magical influence. Again we repeat, TRY IT!—it needs no other recommendation. No family will be without it after they have properly tested its merits. Reader, if you have tried other remedies without success, desist—not indeed in nowise. Are you not fond of Stomach, &c., humors of my Family Cathartic will cure you. Would you be relieved from habitual costiveness, these bottles will effect all that you desire. If you are afflicted with Rheumatic, Neuralgic, or other local pains, two bottles will free you from them. All humors will be eradicated from the blood by the use of six bottles. In short, if you require a physician for any purpose, this is the most reliable, safe, and agreeable to the taste, that has ever been placed within the reach of the public.

Now or Never.

"Now, or never, Frank," said Joseph Long to his friend and room-mate. "He who is going to make a fortune must improve the present opportunity."

"I'm not paid for it."

"Yes you are. If you did so how long do you suppose it would take Brown to find it out?"

"Seventy-five years."

"Brown is shrewd."

"Not he: I have given him abundant opportunity to appreciate me."

"By gracious! I should think you had!"

"I have no heart to do anything. Here I am, in debt for the necessities of life, and not a five dollar bill in my pocket."

"That's your fault. Your salary is enough to live on."

"Enough for you, not for me."

"I saved a hundred last year."

"I am twice that sum in debt."

"You ought to save your money."

"Humph."

"You never will be what you appreciate; if you do not do your best now, you never will."

"I presume it was not the first time."

"No; but what does he expect of a fellow for five hundred dollars a year?"

"It is all you are worth, Frank."

"What?"

The reader will believe that this was rather a close fit—to a man running over with self esteem, and filled with the idea that he was undervalued and under paid.

"I mean just what I say; you are not worth more than five hundred a year."

"That is plain talk," sneered Frank. "I suppose you value yourself at a thousand."

"That is another matter; but I mean to say that a young man with such ideas of business as you cherish, is not a very valuable auxiliary."

"Look here Frank, I don't mean to make you mad, but you are acting on the wrong principle."

"Not on your principle, you mean."

"Don't get rily, Frank."

"O, no!"

"You allow yourself to be late at the store because you get only five hundred dollars a year."

"That's it, precisely. If Brown would give me a decent salary, I would tread square up to the mark. Let him give me eight hundred, as I asked him to do, and he shall have no occasion to find fault."

"Probably you would be just the same man then, that you are now?"

"That is handsome of you Joe."

"He that will not do the best he can in one sphere will do no better in another."

"Get out!"

"But it is true."

"No such thing. Just look at my case. What encouragement have I to do well for Brown, on the pittance he gives me?"

"How do you expect to get more if you do not exert yourself to render your services more valuable? What inducement is there for Brown to give you more salary?"

"I am worth more."

"Why so? Because you come late to the store? Because you feel no particular interest in his business?" said Joseph, with a pleasant smile, to soften the remark.

"But I tell you, if he would give me a decent salary, he would have no reason to find fault," added Frank, pettishly.

"How stupid that is, Frank! Just think of it one moment, and you will grant it is the most absurd thing you ever said in your life."

"No, I shall not; I say it is a fact, and you can't rub it out."

"What is the fact?"

"That if he will pay me well, I shall be all he requires."

"Put yourself in his position."

"Then I would pay the clerks well."

"Would you have men who don't care a straw about your business, who come dragging into the store half or quarter of an hour after the time?"

"Well, I don't know as I should; but that is his fault not mine."

"Very well, if you had such a person in your employ, would you raise his salary?"

"Certainly not."

"Then you would not do precisely what Brown will not do."

"He is an old fogey, any way you can fix him. If you are a mind to make a slave of yourself for five hundred dollars a year, you can do so. I shall take things rather easily until something turns up."

"It will never turn up, Frank, you may depend upon it."

"There's a good time coming boys," hommed Frank, as he rose from his chair and lighted a cigar. Something will turn up, Joe, one of these days. I mean to be a rich man. You will see me ten years from now riding in my own carriage."

"Pshaw! Nothing will turn up, Frank, nothing ever turns up, you must dig it up, yourself."

"Wait, boys wait," replied Frank, as he puffed a volume of blue smoke from his mouth.

"Now why don't you go to the store determined to do your duty, to promote your employer's interest by every honest means?"

"I'm not paid for it."

"Yes you are. If you did so how long do you suppose it would take Brown to find it out?"

"Seventy-five years."

"Brown is shrewd."

"Not he: I have given him abundant opportunity to appreciate me."

"By gracious! I should think you had!"

"What do you mean?"

"You say Brown found fault with you to-day?"

"He did."

"What about?"

"Because I came to the store fifteen minutes after time."

"But was wrong, Frank," continued Joseph, earnestly.

"Humph!" replied the young man contemptuously.

"I presume it was not the first time."

"No; but what does he expect of a fellow for five hundred dollars a year?"

"It is all you are worth, Frank."

"What?"

M. C. Eckron's CELEBRATED LINIMENT.

Equally Good for MAN or BEAST! It has triumphed where all other external applications have failed to have any beneficial effect. It is justly acknowledged to be the greatest EXTERNAL REMEDY in the world, and its sale is unsurpassed in the annals of medicine. Unlike any other popular medicines of the day, it is used and recommended by many eminent members of the Medical Faculty; their judgements having yielded to the many indisputable demonstrations of cures it has performed where all other remedies have failed.

Hundreds of certificates might be given showing almost unfeigned cures in cases of Rheumatism—Neuritis—Spinal Complaints, &c. and in Bruises, Burns, Flesh Wounds, all kinds, old Sores, Sprains, Broken Bones, dislocations, &c., &c.—but a FAIR TRIAL is all that is required to convince the most skeptical of their merits. See Circulars.

Prepared by J. S. & J. E. SELDEN, Hdman, Comr, and sold by druggists throughout the U. S. and Canada.

Poetry.

A Winter Morning.

The keen, clear air—the splendid sight—
We waken to a world of ice;
Where all things are enshrin'd in light,
As by some genie's quaint device.

Tis winter's jubilee—this day
His stores their countless treasures yield,
See how the diamond glances play,
In ceaseless blaze, from tree and field.

The cold bare spot where late we ranged,
The naked woods are seen no more;
This earth to fairy land is changed,
With glittering silver sheeted o'er.

A shower of gems is strew'd around;
The flowers of winter, rich and rare;
Rubies and sapphires deck the ground,
The topaz, emerald, all are there.

The morning sun, with cloudless rays,
His powerless splendor round us streams;
From crusted boughs, and twining sprays,
Fly back unloosed the rainbow's beams.

With more than summer beauty fair,
The trees in winter's garb are shown;
What a rich halo mels in air,
Around their crystal branches thrown!

And yesterday—how changed the view
From what then charm'd us; when the sky
Hung, with its dim and watery hue,
O'er all the soft, still prospect nigh.

The distant groves, array'd in white,
Mighty then like things unreal seem;

Just shown a white in silvery light,
The fictions of a poet's dream;

Like shadowy groves upon that shore
O'er which Elvain's twilight lay,
By bards and sages feign'd of yore,
Are broke on earth heaven's brighter day.

O God of Nature! with what might
Of beauty, shower'd on all below,
Thy guiding power would lead aright
Earth's wanderer all the love to know!

Little at First, but Mighty at Last.

A traveller through a dusty road
Strewed scorns on the lea,

And one took root and sprouted up,
And grew into a tree.

Love sought its shade at evening time,
To breath its early vows,

And age was pleased, in heat of noon,
To bask beneath its boughs.

The dormouse loved its dangling twigs,
The birds sweet music bore,

It stood a glory in its place,
A blessing evermore!

A little spring had lost its way
Amongst the grass and fern;

A passing stranger scooped a well,
Where weary men might turn.

He walked it in and hung with care
A halo round the tiny stream.

He thought not of the dead he did,
But dredged that tool might drink.

He pass'd again—and lo! the well,
His summers never dried,

Had cooled ten thousand parching tongues,
And saved a life beside!

A dreamer dropped a random thought
'Twas old, and yet 'twas new—

A simple fancy of the brain,
But strong in being true;

It shone upon a genial mind,
And lo! its light became,

A lamp of life, a beacon ray,

A monitor flame.

The thought was small—it issue great;

A watch flame on the hill

It shone its radiance far adown,

And cheered the valley still!

A nameless man amid a crowd
That thronged the daily mart,

Let fall the word of hope and love,

Unstudied from the heart;

A whisper on the tumult burst—

A transitory breath—

It raised a brother from the dust,

It saved a soul from death.

O germ! O faint! O word of Love!

O thought at random cast!

Ye were but little at the first,

But mighty at the last!

Anecdotes.

A wounded captain being obliged to have his leg amputated, saw his servant weeping for his master's misfortune. 'What are you crying for, simpleton,' said he, 'don't you see you will have one bod less to polish in the future?'

'Haloo! ejaculated an noxious guardian to his lovely niece, as he entered the parlor and saw her on the sofa, in the arms of a swain who had just popped the question, and seated as the smack, what's the time of day now?'

'I should think it was about half-past twelve,' was the cool reply, 'you see we are almost one.'

A pious minister after lecturing a ragged Sunday school class in a most edifying manner, proposed to close the exercises by singing 'Jordan,' meaning the hymn 'On Jordan's stormy banks I stand.' The worthy man was horrified by hearing the whole school immediately strike up, 'Jordan am a hard road to travel, I believe.'

An old gentleman of eighty-four having taken to the altar a young damsel of sixteen, the clergyman said to him—

'You will find the font at the opposite end of the Church.'

'What do I want of the font?' asked the old gentleman.

'I beg your pardon,' said the clerical wit, 'I thought you had brought this child to be christened.'

'Come Bob, tell us how much you cleared by your speculation?'

'Cleared! ah, cleared my pockets of all I had.'

GEORGE WHITE

were genuine: each was to bring repose to the distracted patient, and soothe irritation by profounder nationality. The inflammation has spread with every Administration until this; and with this, the very powers which enable inflammation to spread seem nearly dead-still. I doubt not it would be so with the administration of any merely political party in the country. Let the people know, then, that this is the grand success of the political treatment of the Slavery question—every wheel of the Government stilled!

In this state of things, it will not be the popular heart, but they who live by smothering that heart, who will withstand those who, now, when all other methods fail, present the one path, opened up before the country in the Christian Law, First pure, then peaceable. Every man knows how alone he gets peace. Priests may murmur over the souls of the departed, or beneath them Requiescat in pace, but no soul ever rested in peace until it had entered it by the path of purity. And the greater is contained in the less: each atom obeys the laws of the sphere. Nations began with individuals, and are now but collections of them, and must obey the laws of individuals. With both, peace blossoms only on the stem of purity.

This then will save us from any national peril, that the Conscience shall be enthroned everywhere Absolute Monarch. It must be allowed untrammeled action, wherever in any man it prohibits slaveholding, and wherever in any man it does not. Only let men feel that they are living and voting at unity with their best light of duty, and they demand no more, but are at ease. When agitation is abroad, it is certain that the lash of Conscience has been loosed somewhere.

In order to secure this we are called to mutual concession—to the concession of each moral sense to the other of all it claims—it being understood that nothing can be claimed by either for political advantage, but only from such a sense of the moral necessity of such a claim as shall never shrink from any result whatever, which are needed to secure it.

If the two portions of the country cannot unite, and feel at the same moment ready to face the Eternal Judge, with the full conviction that they are each completely true to God and to every man, white and black, bond and free, on Earth, let them sink together beneath the waters under the Earth, but never, never unite, or remain united.

We are called the more to this concession, because the error has been on both sides, and is now. The men whose consciences were first stirred on this subject have dwelt on the inhumanity of slaveholders, without remembering to ask whether they were not slaveholders. For whatever the Federal Government sanctions or adopts is of course by complicity of all who are parties to that Federal Compact. As the people of Virginia did not derive their power to hold slaves from the Union, and do not now, of course none of the rest of the States, or of the individuals of the States, are involved in it. They are, indeed, in a high sense, concerned in all that concerns their fellow-men; but not otherwise are they morally involved, than as they are in widow-burning in Hindostan, or cannibalism in the Fejee Islands. Do we, as Americans, take upon our consciences the sins, as we may think them, of Great Britain or Japan, because we have treaties with those nations? Do England and France become responsible for one another's policy, or assume each other's National Church, because, for a different object, they have formed an alliance? The United States are but such an alliance. And, as England and France have only a common responsibility for what is done in the war with Russia, so have the people of the Free States only a responsibility for what is done by the Federal Union as such. So we can only look upon the position of the class of anti-slavery men whose motto is "No union with slaveholders," as a blunder, occasioned by their not having union with their real duty. Had they worked by the Christian principle,

First cast the beam out of thine own eye, and so clearly to cast the mote out of thy brother's; and not wasted their energies on slavery in the South, but concentrated them on slavery in the North, they would have put in a demand which, so surely as God made man, in Maine and California, would have received the approval of every sincere soul from Maine to California.

This blunder has had its antithetical one in the South. And here, I may say, we must guard against our prejudices. As a Virginian, with no tie of relationship northward, of the remotest kind, past or present if I feel how easily I might slide into a justification of my dear mother, the South. But the soul knows no prejudices or sections, and must see all under the pure light of reason and conscience.

[CONCLUDED IN OUR NEXT.]

CLOTHIER. The Proprietor of the Granite Saloon will give one of his rare, and unrivaled preparations this afternoon and evening. [BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.]

MAGNIFICENT CARPET STORE. It would be a dereliction of an editorial duty not to mention the magnificent Carpet Store which has just opened at Nos. 283 and 285 Washington Street, Boston, by Messrs. John H. Pray, Sons & Co.

We might indulge in encomiums upon the building, location, stock, capital and experience which this firm so happily enjoy for the successful prosecution of business, but these appear more worthy of notice.

Mr. John H. Pray, the senior member of the firm, is a native of this town. Mr. Edward Turner, a junior member of the firm, is Quincey parentage, and a resident here the last ten years. Both these gentlemen have been long and favorably known to the citizens of this place and vicinity. But it is from our own personal acquaintance with them, that the extraordinary merits of this firm, we feel persuaded, will be found in the inherent love of, and the tenacity with each individual comprising it, adheres to that good old fashion system of Ethics, which recognizes "Honesty as the best policy";—yea, the very best policy, not only in trade, but in religion, in politics, and all things else that concerns man's happiness and welfare. It is this adherence to principle and conscience—an honest desire and determination to give a customer his money's worth—to deal justly, with a consistency of character throughout, which gives us an abiding confidence in this firm; and therefore, we have great pleasure in recommending it to the public.

WOOD-CUTTING MACHINE. The public would do well to call and examine R. Daniels' Patent Granular Fuel and Cutter for manufacturing fuel from now almost worthless twigs and brushwood, now on exhibition, in this place, between the Town House and the Railroad Depot. This fuel machine is capable of cutting, with a two-horse power, one cord of wood or hundred bushels of granular fuel, per hour, which answers every purpose of charcoal, and is much cheaper. The Agent, D. S. French, is an affable gentleman, and very ready to explain and answer all enquiries.

For the Patriot.
Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, MARCH 13, 1856.

Business—Money.—The Banks once more—General Court—United States Senator—Ways and Means from Washington—Grand Issue for the next Presidential contest. News from John Bull—Peace Arbitration Rumors—A Great Gun from New Hampshire—Fire Department of Quincy.

Advices from Europe of yesterday, are anything but satisfactory to the lovers of peace. A sharp correspondence was going on between Mr. Buchanan and Lords Clarendon and Palmerston in reference to misstatements contained in their speeches.—These have troubled our minister so much that he has informed our Government of the facts. President Pierce, it is said, does not wish to submit the Central American question to arbitration; nor is he in favor of the abrogation of the "Treaty." That why chap, the Emperor Louis Napoleon, of France, it is said, has proposed to arbitrate the differences now existing between England and the United States, and that the former has given her consent, but I opine it will be no go with our government.

Intense anxiety has been experienced, on the result of the New Hampshire State Election, which came off on Tuesday last. Being President Pierce's own state, the consequences will have no little bearing on the next Presidential election. The struggle was a tremendous one,—such as never was known before in the Granite State. Up to the moment of my writing, returns from one hundred and fifty-four towns have Democratic gain over last year, of seven thousand votes. There remains seventy small town to be heard from. Wells, the Democratic candidate, will probably not gain enough in these to overcome Metcalf's majority last year, 10,700. Notwithstanding the large Democratic gain to the Legislature in every portion of the State, the American party have carried both branches of the Legislature by a very small majority. But the majority principle prevailing in New Hampshire, there is no choice of Governor by the people. So the electoral vote of New Hampshire next November is uncertain, or in obedience.

In the proceedings of your Annual March Meeting of Quincy, I perceive the pay to the Engine Companies is increased to five dollars each member. This is not enough, but will do until next year, when I hope the sum will be doubled. I would respectfully suggest to the Engineers of your worthy Fire Department to submit an Annual Report to the town of the number of alarms; fires; amount of loss by fires and the sums insured. Also the equipments and yearly expense of the Department, and any other suggestions that in their wisdom may occur to them. The town would then more highly appreciate their services; and be more liberal in their appropriations, to an enterprising class of citizens, who have heretofore "worked for nothing and for themselves."

A DISINTERESTED PARTY.

For the Patriot.
Mr. Charles Robinson.

This gentleman, who is called by the Black Republicans, governor of Kansas, is served up in the following summary manner, by Senator Jones of Tennessee, in reply to an Abolition speech, lately delivered in the Senate, by Senator Wilson, from this State, in which reference is made to this individual. Senator Jones said he should not resort to newspapers for information, but should take the records of the country as authority for what he had to say. He remarked that,

Mr. Charles Robinson, was once a citizen of the State of California; and what was he there? He was the head and front, the leader of a band of desperadoes, as infamous as ever disgraced any age or country. He it was that organized a band in the city of Sacramento for the purpose of warring against the rights of property there. He it was who led that band in that memorable, ever to be execrated conflict, in which the peaceful mayor of the city of Sacramento, and the sheriff of that county, in attempting to execute the law, were shot down. He was arrested and put in prison, but finally effected his escape; and the next we hear of him, is in Kansas, at his old game, leading on desperadoes to the violation of the law and resistance to the legal authorities of the country."

This is the character of the individual whose cause the Boston Journal so warmly espoused; and who interested themselves so much in procuring Sharpe's Rifles for his use; and the same ruffian that that nest of traitors at Washington are instigating to acts of treason; exciting him to open rebellion against the government and the constituted laws of the land. Congress should make an appropriation for a lot of halters—a quantity is very much needed at this time.

As to the "Bonfires and Illuminations" which took place when Quincy was incorporated, if that was so, and the people afterwards found they were disappointed, why did they not petition the Legislature at the time and have the matter set right?

Ship Cove which has been alluded to by the writer of the article of the 23d, as the "hetty petty," is the original boundary line between Braintree and Quincy; that Cove is none other than what is now called Crane Creek, in honor of Mr. Thomas Crane, who formerly lived in the house where Mr. Joseph Richardson now lives. The Braintree Record, in speaking of this line and the division of the two precincts, expressly says, commencing at the head of Ship Cove and running up said Cove, leaving the living of John Newcomb, Sen., on the south, or words to that effect. Now, Mr. Editor, any candid man will see at a glance that no other Cove is meant but the one just mentioned, and John Newcomb, Sen., lived at that time in the house standing near the present residence of Captain Levi White, which is south of said Cove; and furthermore, no person ever heard of Hayward's Creek being called Ship Cove. It has been called by that name for more than a century, in honor of the families of that name who have resided near the head of that Creek for more than two centuries, and no Newcomb has ever lived south of Hayward's Creek, if the memory of the oldest inhabitant can be credited.

All we ask, says the writer before-named, "is, the restoration of our land and our people."

The town of Quincy has no claim whatever in law or equity to one foot of the territory of Braintree. The line was correctly run according to the original Parish lines, between the middle and north Precincts, and has never been disputed till 1850 or 1851, when some persons at the Neck, thinking they were slighted in not receiving their quota of town officers, and believing that if annexed to Quincy they would immediately receive office, started the above-named project.

And let the case be decided as it may, by wise legislators, no good or valid reason has been or can be produced strong enough to influence an unprejudiced mind in favor of annexing that valuable part of the ancient town of Braintree to Quincy. VERITUS.

PATIENCE. We must beg the favor of our friends, Messrs. Locke & Co., Dry Goods Dealers, Hanover Street, Boston, to exercise this virtue for one week longer. Their article is in type and shall appear in our next.

Worthy Entertainment.

MR. EDITOR. I am glad to hear that the Misses Bartlets assisted by Mr. Ball, and an accomplished singer from Boston, Mrs. L. —e, at the solicitations of their friends, have concluded to give a Musical Entertainment at the Town Hall, one evening next week. Anything I could say eulogistic of Mr. Ball's musical acquirements, is unnecessary, for the numerous friends he made here last winter bear testimony to his merits as an artist; and I have no doubt that his invitation will be responded to by a large and appreciating audience. The Entertainment will be composed of productions from eminent authors, and will, without doubt, do credit to the performers, who have all had the benefit of an elaborate education, and been associated with some of the most distinguished artists. Every one will be well paid for going.

A DISINTERESTED PARTY.

For the Patriot.

Mr. Charles Robinson.

This gentleman, who is called by the Black Republicans, governor of Kansas, is served up in the following summary manner, by Senator Jones of Tennessee, in reply to an Abolition speech, lately delivered in the Senate, by Senator Wilson, from this State, in which reference is made to this individual. Senator Jones said he should not resort to newspapers for information, but should take the records of the country as authority for what he had to say. He remarked that,

Mr. Charles Robinson, was once a citizen of the State of California; and what was he there? He was the head and front, the leader of a band of desperadoes, as infamous as ever disgraced any age or country. He it was that organized a band in the city of Sacramento for the purpose of warring against the rights of property there. He it was who led that band in that memorable, ever to be execrated conflict, in which the peaceful mayor of the city of Sacramento, and the sheriff of that county, in attempting to execute the law, were shot down. He was arrested and put in prison, but finally effected his escape; and the next we hear of him, is in Kansas, at his old game, leading on desperadoes to the violation of the law and resistance to the legal authorities of the country."

A liberal donation came with the above notice, conclusively showing that in the exuberance of their joy they did not forget their friends, for which we wish them many years of anticipated delight and prosperity.

Poetry.

Poem.

At a recent thirty-seventh anniversary meeting of the Republican Institution, held in Boston—an institution which has no connection with the Republican party, but is designed to cultivate a true Republican spirit—the following spirited poem, by Jeffrey R. Brackett, was read:

Who to Parnassian heights aspires,
Amid these mountain-boring days?
When burning words rush o'er the wires,
Who Pegasean flight essay?

Although 'tis said all men are liars? (lyres.)
Who tempts the Apollonian lays?

'Tis an old question, and not mine,

Which I repeat—Where are the Nine?

While grosser ones sell every day,

The vein poetic does not pay.

But as for Heliconian rills—

Let them flow, as we are sure

Of blessings, with their numerous ills;

For love of Burns! we will endure

Their intermittent watery chills;

And hydraulic streams—

Now they have left off drinking nectar;

From the cup the cap was wrested,

When Barnum's temperance was tested.

Kind Nature gives the golden grain,

And clustering grapes, but ah! how vain!

All drinks but water are forbidden;

Until one comes to be bed-ridden,

And when his friends put on the sable,

The spirit comes, beneath the table.

But things above board are the best;

Affairs sub-roast I detest.

Then let's be plain; we've come to night,

To dine at Parker's, full in sight,

We show our colors on the wall,

Adding new beauty to this hall.

We are Republicans? true blue,

Of the old school, and not the new.

We love the North, South, East and West,

But love the whole together best.

Though it is yearly that we meet,

Each time we come, some empty seat

Speaks of the fatal rapid stream,

In which life flows while we dream.

A twelve-month since, at your right hand,

Our elder brother sat—Degrad!

Here would I pay a tribute small,

To one our memories now recall.

A native of the South of France,

It was his sunny smile and glance;

As the rich wine of its fair plains,

Was the warm blood within his veins,

Flowing from an untrammelled heart,

That knew no guile, no sordid art,

The joyousness of childhood's hours

Graced, without lessening, manhood's powers;

And when he left his boyhood's home,

He had a thousand scenes to roam,

His quick vivacity of mind,

Fresh fields for enterprise could find.

He bade the idle water-fall

Turn the swift wheels, and work for all.

And to our narrow city gave

Acres of land 'neath the wave,

Or, building highways, iron-bound;

Was "faithful" 'mong the "Faithless" bound;

Bright, apt, intelligent and true,

Frenchman and Yankee, through and through.

But though he is no longer here,

He lives by will the "fairest";

Thoughtful of those whose claims were first,

Safely provided for them by trust;

Then to our Harvard freely goes;

For wealth of living ever lives;

And where the Sisters orphans tend,

Art Maria shall ascend.

With prayers to God, who loveth all,

For him who loved the great and small.

His kindred lie where fleurs-de-lis

Bend o'er their graves, all silently,

But his, the fatherless shall dress,

And widow's knees the turf shall press.

The flag of France, three colors grace,

Three colors, that above your side,

Who with unmasted eye can trace

Their blending beauties is but dead,

Unmindful of the victories won,

By Lafayette and Washington.

Napoleon's dust is by the Seine,

Our Father's by Potomac's side;

If little hearts ne'er beat in vain,

Why flouted their copious tide?

If not to make this orb called earth,

A stepping place to one more worth.

To spend this life aright!

To make his country great;

To add unto its power and might,

And to direct its fate?

This is the patriot's blest employ,

And fits him for a higher joy.

The tide of time runs fast,

Our ship still floats along,

The stars still fluttering round its mast,

The Union still is strong!

Its music's tramp is on the deck;

While that is heard we fear no wreck.

Anecdotes.

A gentleman who just returned from Arkansas heard the following conversation at a tavern:

"Hallow boy!"

"Hallow, yourself!"

"Can I get breakfast here?"

"I don't reckon you can."

"Why not?"

"Massa away, Mistress drunk, the baby's got the colic, and I don't care a darn for nobody."

Colonel D—, of the British army, well known for his gigantic size and burly deportment, being once importuned by a diminutive tailor for payment of a bill, petulantly exclaimed, "If you were not such a little reptile, I would kick you down stairs!"

"Little reptile!" remonstrated the dun, "and what if I am? Recollect, Colonel, that we can't all be great brutes!"

"Did your fall hurt you?" said one Patlander to another, who had fallen from the top of a two-story house.

"Not in the least honey, 'twas stoppin' so quick, that hurt me."

ing large interests, is a new star lit in the Heavens. Men see it, and feel the presence of the unseen higher Power; they know with joy that the earth is more than a moving ant-hill. This joy cannot be moved by any danger or loss. If the Union were sundered by such a stand, does it not pay in that it props the whole Earth? For were the Union divided on a principle of right, a voice like the angel-hymn of a Second Advent would go forth, proclaiming the law by which thrones tremble, and all oppressions and evils falls as leaves in October: First pure, then peaceful.

Before all, then, let us dismiss Fear. Let us, with Montaigne, fear nothing as much as fear. Southern men! Northern men! be one in being brave for your light and your right! If it should be found ever necessary to separate—as I pray I may never believe more than I do now—still would mutual honor survive; and by no event can any obstruction befall the vast destiny for which these superb American hills and plains were planned. By their great strength, these national throes proclaim the grandeur of a Nation's new birth. Hark! there is now as of old a voice on the angry waters, ‘It is I: be not afraid.’ Serene and unharmed above our small cares and storms is enthroned the Genius in whose mind once, as in an egg, lay the Western Hemisphere, and Columbus, and Washington, and to our tearful prayer replies, Oh man, think that I have created these in vain? Know that until God is dethrown, the Right must prevail: Until He dies, nothing good can die!

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 22d, 1856.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

THE HANCOCK LIGHT GUARDS concluded the series of their popular Assemblies on Friday evening last. It was the most brilliant one of the season. Their neat and commodious Armory was tastefully decorated, and the sweetest of music was in attendance to enliven the occasion. The audience was large, and so happily composed, as to elicit the greatest amount of pleasure.

There might be seen the soldier, the civilian, the matron, the maiden, the young and the middle aged, co-mingling in feeling and sentiment, with buoyant spirits and happy countenances, leading off to the soul-stirring strains of melody which burst forth from Bond's unrivaled Band, in the graceful and animating dance. It was so true a type of what a republican assemblage should be, that with pleasant associations we lingered around the scene long after the finger of time had pointed to the midnight hour.

The spring time of year, however, is now upon us, which calls from our citizens soldiers other duties and avocations; but we trust, with the return of the convivial season, that these assemblies, which have been so fruitful a source of rational amusement, innocent recreation, and social and intellectual communion to our citizens, will be renewed.

In the meantime the Guards have our best wishes; may their future career be a prosperous and joyous one; but should the dark cloud which now obscures the horizon, break forth, desolating the country in war, they will have the pleasing satisfaction to know, that the martial spirit which their own generous natures have imparted to the community has been fully appreciated. Then will the daughters of our heroic revolutionary mothers, show by their example, that they are worthy descendants of that noble stock.

In regard to Legislative matters, little has been matured at the State House since my last. A new Bank Bill of a stringent character has been by leave, introduced in the Senate by Mr. Odione, of Boston. The main features of the Bill are as follows:

Any Bank where capital shall not exceed $500,000, shall have nine or twelve directors, and those exceeding $500,000 shall have not less than twelve directors; and not more than two-thirds of the directors of any bank shall be eligible to a re-election, and no director shall serve less than three consecutive years, unless as President. No bank to pay more than seven per cent. dividend to its stockholders; the excess to be reserved for special exigencies, until it shall amount to twenty per cent. of the capital of the bank; the profits beyond this per centage to be paid into the Treasury to constitute a fund for the redemption of bills of insolvent banks; no bank to have due to it from any one person or corporation more than fifteen per cent. of its capital, or sixty thousand dollars."

Although there is a strong jealousy towards the banks by our present Legislature, it is entertained as to the political effect of the Enlistment and Central American correspondence. The recent friendly feeling demonstrated towards Mr. Buchanan will remain until his successor arrives, whom Mr. Buchanan will present immediately.

FIRE. The dwelling-house and barn of Garret Madigan, on Common Street, in this town, were totally destroyed by fire, on Sunday night last. Insured at Weymouth.

THE CONCERT given at the Town Hall on Wednesday evening last, by the Misses Bartletts, was warmly and enthusiastically received. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, which rendered the evening one of the most unpleasant of the season, still there was a large and fashionable audience present, who appeared to fully appreciate the rich intellectual treat prepared for them.

For the Patriot. Interesting Exercises.

MR. EDITOR:—The citizens residing in and near the West School District of Quincy, were richly entertained, on Wednesday evening, the 12 inst., by an exhibition in the Grammar Department of the Willard School, under the direction, and by invitation of its faithful and popular teacher, S. Dewing, Jr., Esq. The exercises were confined to declamation; and fitting up the school-room for the occasion, also the selection of pieces, reflected great credit upon the taste and good management of the instructor. Although the various exercises lasted over three hours, the audience of some three hundred spectators listen with uninterrupted gratification.

Many of the single dissertations were characterized by sentiments of lofty patriotism, selected as they were from the writings of the great and good men of our own and other countries. The writings of men professing true genius belong to no one country, they are the property and gems of the world. The crowning excellence of the evening's intellectual entertainment was the correctness with which the English language was used. Natural inflection of voice; clearness in enunciation; and a just regard to pauses, were conspicuous in the whole of the exercises.

A few days after the exhibition, the pupils of his school, as a small appreciation of their love and esteem, presented Mr. Dewing, through Miss Caroline Locke, a gold watch chain to be worn by him as a memento of scholars' regard to a good teacher.

A new Way from Quincy to Boston.—Legislative.—New Bank project.—Kanzas in a state of trouble.—Senator Clayton.—City Matters.—Theatres.—Mr. Choate's Lecture.

It is understood here, that a large part of the capital stock for a horse Railroad to run from Milton Lower Mills, over the Dorchester Turnpike to State Street, Boston, is taken up, mostly by the enterprising citizens of Dorchester; and that the work is likely to commence shortly. It is not too chimerical to believe, that a branch of Horse Railroad, will soon be built, to intersect the Dorchester track, from Quincy Centre. The nearest distance is about four miles over the Neponset Turnpike. A divergence through Port Norfolk as is intended, and north of Harrison Square, to Glover's corner, would increase the distance; but greatly convenience the inhabitants of those beautiful and growing villages of Dorchester. The expense of the track from Quincy to Dorchester, would fall within the limits of forty thousand dollars. The transit to Boston, would be one hour, but the passengers would land fresh in State Street; which they cannot now reach under forty-five minutes from Quincy, and have a long walk at that, from the Depot on Kneeland Street. The Dorchester directors have estimated the cost of the road and the travel that must and will pass over it, and are satisfied it will pay a good dividend on the investment, and have already subscribed one-fourth of the stock.

HAS triumphed where all other external applications have failed to have any beneficial effect.

It is justly acknowledged to be the greatest EXTERNAL REMEDY in the world, and its sale is unsurpassed in the annals of medicine.

Unlike most other popular medicines of the day, it is used and recommended by many eminent members of the Medical Faculty; their prejudices having yielded to the many indisputable demonstrations of cures it has performed where all other remedies have failed.

Hundreds of certificates might be given showing almost unopposed for cures in cases of Rheumatism—Neuralgia—Spinal Complaints, &c., and in Bruises, Burns, Frost, Wind, &c., of all kinds, old Sores, Sprains, Broken Bones, &c., &c.,—but a FAIR TRIAL is all that is required to convince the most skeptical of its merits.

Poetry.

Trials of an Editor.

How often we think when reading the news, An editor could please if he choose—
But such a paper as this, why all must agree That a thing of less interest they never did see.
But, Sir C. G., reflect ere you make a noise on,
That one man's meat is another man's poison;
And lest you persist in your steady denials,
We'll give you a few of an editor's trials.

First, a pretty young lady, sprightly and fair,
With the paper she has waitzes up to a chair,
And hastily takes off all that she saw,
She throws it aside with a mutter "pshaw!"
No marriages here—

I think it is queer,
When there's ever so many,
They don't publish any.

Here's poetry,
And battles,
Sketches,
And tales,
Without ending,
But no picnics, or concerts, or parties for me—
Such trash on paper I never did see,

Then a nice young man with a cane and mustache
Who certainly thinks he's cutting a dash,
Looks over the list of plays and soirees,
As if vainly trying his fancy to please,
In theaters,
Circuses,
Operas,
Balls,
And wonders what editors mean,
By printing a paper not fit to be seen.

Sentimental young lady next picks up the paper,
And reads by the light of a dim-burning taper;
And wonders if lines here addressed to Miss Redo,
Were not written to her by some clever young fellow.

Who's pretty and witty, and learned and wise,
But she stops in alarm at the dark hazel eyes.

What a pity it's true,
And now Mr. Editor,
Tis all blamed on you.

What speeches,
And sermons,
And news,
By despatch;
To match;
But no sketches or tales that I can see—
What kind of a man must the editor be?

Next a grave politician who with dignity glows,
Adjusts his gold spectacles over his nose;
Takes a huge pinch of snuff before he proceeds,
Then opens the paper and leisurely reads,
Of breeches,
Of House,
And foreign Reports,
And speeches,
And accidents,
Suicides,
Deaths,
And finishing, wonders what sort of a blunder
The whole of community is laboring under;
To support a paper whose print is so small,
She wonders how some people can read it at all.

Now a prime old maid the paper espies,
And holding it carefully off from her eyes,
And frequently muttering "la! la! and "du! tell!"
She manages some way to read very well,
The marriages, The robberies,
Accidents, And murders,
Suicides, All in a
Deaths, Breath;
And says, as he reads the last column of war,
What strange kind of people the editors are;
These rhymes and these love stories to print,
It woud do any good I would give them a hint.

Next an angry contributor, eager for fame,
I'm ruined, sir, ruined—my success, sir, is o'er,
So many mistakes were ne'er heard of before—
Look here at this! Sonnet addressed to my Lady, You've made it a Bonnet and Dress for a Baby!
Don't talk of my writing, and say it was that—
You're an editor, sir, but no gent!—that's flat.

The farmer complains that his crops are neglected,
While time is spent in guessing who'll be elected,
The Minister said it should be more sedate,
And not so much wasted on matters of State;
And thousands of other complaints are made
And known.

Which the editor's back has to bear all alone;
But the worst of it is, they all join in saying,
Such a paper as this, he can print without paying

The Love that Lasts.

'T is not a flower of instant growth;
But from an unsuspected germ,
That lay within the hearts of both,
Assumes its everlasting form.

As daisy-buds, among the grass,
With the same green do silent grow,
Nor mads nor boys that laughing pass
Can tell if they be flowers or no,—

Till, on some genial morn in May,
Their timid, modest leaflets rise,
Disclosing beauties to the day
That strikes the gazer with surprise;—

So soft, so sweet, so mild, so holy,
So cheerful in obscurest shades,
So unpretending, meek, and lowly,
And yet the pride of each green glade.

So love doth spring, so love doth grow,
If it be such as never dies;
But who but just loves here below;
The flower blooms on in Paradise.

Anecdotes.

A man travelling in the South, met a negro on the road with craps on his hat, and accosted him with—

You have lost some of your relatives, I see."

Yes, Massa'

Was it a near or distant relative?

Yes, pretty distant—"about twenty-four miles," was the reply.

Sonny, what are wages here?

Don't know.'

What does your father get on Saturday night?

Tight as a brick!

Smith and Brown running opposite ways round a corner, struck each other.

"Oh dear," said Smith, "how you make my head ring."

"That's a sign it's hollow," said B.

"Didnt your ring?" said Smith.

No."

That's a sign it's cracked."

QUINCY PATRIOT

SATURDAY, MARCH 29.

the kitchen, you graceless churl, you ungrateful, pestilential lout that you are! There was grand and good philosophy in the old time custom of having a buffoon, or music at the dinner-table.—Hall's Journal of Health.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, March 29th, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

A STATE MUSTER. The project of holding a general muster of all the troops comprising the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, is under serious advisement. In that event, his Excellency, Gov. Gardner, will take the command. There are, we believe, about seven thousand soldiers in the State military service. Should the proposition be consummated, it will be the grandest display of citizen soldiery ever witnessed in this country.

Snow. In January, 1804, the snow fell four feet on a level, and rain coming soon after, a hard crust was formed. Snow was to be seen that year on the north side of the walls, as late as the end of June. June 8, 1816, it snowed all day in Vermont. On the 9th of November, 1809, the heavy bell in Brattle square, Boston, was raised, the snow falling in the afternoon to the depth of ten inches.

Josiah B. Kilbourn. Last Wednesday afternoon, a dead body was found floating in the water near Cambridge bridge. Upon searching the clothes of the corpse, there were found numerous papers which established beyond a doubt that the body was that of Josiah B. Kilbourn. He had been missing since the 21st of November last, and was at that time one of the directors of the Grocers' Bank.

Fast Day in New Hampshire. Gov. Metcalf has appointed Thursday, the 10th of April next, as a day of Fasting, Humiliation, and Prayer.

No Charge for Thrashing Greeley. The Washington grand jury did not find a bill against Mr. Rust for his assault on Mr. Greeley. The Washington Star says it is not customary for the Courts to notice these little affairs, but to leave people to settle them in their own way. Mr. Greeley took no part in the complaint against his assailant.

Liquor Prosecutions. On the 21st inst. George H. Bundy, of the Hancock House in this town, was brought before Justice Kingsbury, of Weymouth, upon two complaints for selling intoxicating liquor, and was convicted upon each, and sentenced. Defendant appealed to the Court of Common Pleas, and recognized to appear. E. F. Hall, Esq. for the government.

On the 22d inst., Constable Small, of Weymouth, seized about fifty gallons of intoxicating liquors in the dwelling house of Thomas McCready, of East Weymouth. The search warrant was issued by Justice Kingsbury, of Weymouth.

Gridley Totman, of this town, has been fined and sentenced for a violation of the liquor law, from which he appealed.

The Fruit Crop. The Newark Daily Advertiser states that the prospects, in New Jersey, of a large yield of fruit, were never better than at the present time. The buds are generally uninjured, and the lingering cold weather will prevent them swelling until the season is so far advanced as to have them suffer from the high winds or frosts.

The Coming Wheat. The Shenandoah, Va., Tenth Legion, says that since the snow and ice have disappeared, the growing crops of grain presents a most promising appearance—the wheat looks thrifty and stands well upon the ground.

Serious Accident. Capt. Nathaniel Hayden Jr., of this town, on Wednesday last, while assisting the departure of a heavily loaded stone wagon from the quarry of B. B. Newcomb, Esq., was caught and one of the wheels passed over his leg, crushing it to atoms, and rendering amputation necessary.

Loss of a Ship. The ship John Rutledge, Kelley, from Liverpool, January 16, for New York, got among the ice, February 19, lat. 45° 30', lon. 40', and foundered. The crew and passengers took to the boats, one of which, containing thirteen persons, was picked up by the Germania of New York from Havre, with Thomas W. Nye, of New Bedford, the only survivor, the rest having perished with starvation and cold. All the other boats are supposed to have been lost. The steerage passengers numbered one hundred and twenty-five, and the crew twenty-five.

Clam Chowder. In conformity to the wishes of his friends, and the example of the Executive of this State, the proprietor of the Granite Saloon, has appointed this day as one of feasting—not of fasting,—of material, not "spiritual" comforts; of the rational enjoyment of the good things which a kind Providence has so bountifully provided us; he would therefore be happy to meet all who feel inclined to join in the festivities of the occasion, at his Council Room, this afternoon and evening. "God save the Commonwealth."

Fast Day Proclamation.

Dependant upon a gracious Providence for every blessing that elevates humanity, and for every pleasure that gives charm to life, and for every capability of contemplating the interests of immortality, both the hallowed practice of our forefathers, and the approach of that season when the silent forces of the universe awaken to renewed life the productive elements of the earth,—call upon us to set aside a day, on which, as individuals and as a nation, we may recount the blessings and lament the transgressions of the past, and invoke renewed protection and continued guidance for the future.

I do, therefore, with the advice and consent of the Council, appoint Thursday, the tenth day of April next, to be observed as a day of Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer. May the citizens of our Commonwealth on that day assemble in their various places of public worship, unite as one people in the confession of national transgressions,—the lust of power, the bitterness of party rancor, sectional strife,—the subordination of right to expediency,—the bondage of prejudice; of passion, of intemperance,—man's thraldom unto man,—and above all, our continual forgetfulness of human frailty, and God's overruling omnipotence.

May they confess and deplore man's personal delinquencies, remembering that the reformation of the individual lies at the foundation of national improvement.

May they, while confessing the sins of the past, pray that the future in God's Providence, may shadow for his glory the welfare of the nations:

That humanity may be elevated,—the ignorant guided aright,—the feeble guarded, the wicked restrained, and the oppressed vindicated:

That all the pleasures and affections of the household and hearthstone may be deepened and widened, so that the holiest influences and happiest enjoyments may crown the homes of our people:

That our material interest may be cherished and protected, so that the hand that labors may meet a sure recompence, and well rewarded industry continue the glory of our land:

That our educational system may be fostered, and intellectual progress keep pace with the discoveries of science and the advancement of the arts:

That our charitable institutions may be blessed by the Father of Mercies, and that human sympathy may extend as wide as the sphere of human suffering:

That vital and personal religion may make its sanctuary in the hearts of our people, and that our country may ever be a Christian land, abounding in the blessings, governed by the spirit, and rich with the promise of the Gospel.

AFTER ATTENDING THE FUNERAL OF MRS. ELMIRA FOSTER.

Again we mourn; the messenger of Death has required another beloved friend to leave this earthly tabernacle, and we are obliged, however reluctantly, to submit; for it is a summons from the Lord, and to His will we bow. He has not called an aged person, worn and weary of the world; the last perhaps of many friends, deprived of health, home, and ambition; without which life is a mere burden; neither has he taken the little innocent child, lovely and interesting, yet unacquainted with the toils and duties of life; but in the death of Mrs. Foster, he has chosen one in the prime of her years; one useful to home and society,—one whose life was cheerful, diligent and virtuous, without ostentation. Useful and much beloved by those who knew her best. She leaves a kind husband to whom she was much devoted, and her company was the treasure of his life. Alas! those deep drawn sighs as he took his last farewell, spoke too much of his soul-stirred affliction, and will leave a lasting impression in the memory of those who witnessed the scene; every eye was moistened with sympathy. May God be with him and comfort him in his solitude; may he feel assured that she has gone home to the Father who watches over all his works, the author and creator of all things, who directs them as seems best in his wisdom, for his own holy purposes. We believe, that in his benevolence, he has created a world beyond the grave, where all shall be re-united; where sickness and sorrow cannot dwell, and separation shall be known no more forever. May her aged father, brothers, and sisters be reconciled to her death, and as she was always a comforter to them in all their trials while in the flesh, may her spirit still hover around, shedding its halo of divine light and influence over their earthly career, and ready to receive and welcome them to the "House made with hands, eternal in the heavens." May her death, have a tendency to awaken and exalt the thoughts of her many relatives and friends, teaching them the uncertainties and frailties of life, and a desire to reconcile their minds to an all-wise power, and ready to exclaim with the poet:

"Father of Love, thy will be done."

BOSTON CORRESPONDENCE.
BOSTON, MARCH 27, 1856.

Ball in Paris.—Nicaraguan Controversy.—A great country to be developed and Anglo-Saxonized.—Hon. Wm. S. Damrell; pistols and coffee.—Legislative.—Liquor Law.

A glance at the political horoscope of the present week, presages nothing worthy of alarm. On the other side of the Atlantic, peace negotiations are progressing between Russia and the Allies, with the strongest ultimate hopes of success. A subscription ball was given by the American residents in Paris in commemoration of the birth day of Washington. It came off on Friday evening, the 22d ult., in the magnificent saloons of the Hotel du Louvre; and was a most brilliant affair. The invitations were limited to one thousand. We are told the ball commenced at ten, and from that hour up to one in the morning the arrival of guests, comprising the élite of the American and foreign society present in Paris, continued without intermission. Nearly all the foreign ministers at Paris, with the Peace Commissioners, honored the occasion with their presence and mingled in the merry dance. The American minister, Mr. Mason and his family, with the Committee, received the guests in the Foyer, which was likewise decorated with much taste. The toilettes of the ladies were magnificent. The ball continued with great animation until morning.

The Nicaraguan controversy is becoming a matter of great commercial interest. A British fleet is on its way to Greystown, for what objects, it is not certainly known. But their movements will not be unlikely to rouse Uncle Sam's energies, and entangle the United States in unpleasant, if not angry negotiations. This is but opening the first chapter of our intercourse with the Central and South American States. Their present imbecile governments, will perhaps before one generation passes, melt away by the Norman-Saxon enterprise. This extensive region is eminently well situated for a great and powerful nation. The markets of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans are near it. A rich soil and salubrious climate; it will ultimately become the seat of as extensive agricultural and commercial region as British India now is. But I pass for the present to other matters.

Mr. Damrell, our Representative in Congress, made his maiden speech a few days since. It will be printed and published in pamphlet form. This gentleman is a ready and fluent speaker if reports are true. His speech caused quite a commotion among the chivalry Southerners, on the ground, that some personal affront was intended. In fact, one of them virtually sent Mr. Damrell a challenge at mortal combat, or a formal demand in writing for an apology; which means the same thing at Washington.

At home, matters are very quiet this week. The State Legislature have under consideration, a new Exemption Case, which if it passes will repeal all previous exemption acts. A bill relating to Saving Banks has passed the Senate to be engrossed, and this is now before the House. It has relation to investments, which I may notice hereafter if it becomes a law. The Committee to whom was referred the Liquor Law of this State have had several hearings of witnesses. The Evening Traveller thus discourses on the subject:—

"Among others, the Mayor and the Captains of our Police have been before them. The current testimony of these gentlemen is that our country may ever be a Christian land, abounding in the blessings, governed by the spirit, and rich with the promise of the Gospel.

A CARD FROM MISSOURIANS.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.

A printed Circular, adopted at a mass meeting of the citizens of the county of Lafayette, in Western Missouri, has been issued. It is addressed to the President and people of the United States. This emphatically denounces as false the statement that there exists in any portion of the State an organized force for the invasion of Kansas and the "butchery" of its Free State inhabitants. The circular says:

"West of Jefferson City, (save those which are mounted on the bristling ramparts of Lawrence) we know of but one piece of artillery, not in the keeping of arsenals of the General Government."

The Circular goes on to say that the subscribers are not indifferent spectators of the strife in Kansas. Many of them have brothers and sons, legitimate settlers in the colony.

"We have," they say, "seen pouring through our own State, from the East, a corrupt horde, concentrating for plunder and destruction around kindred and yet more moved not. True, some of our impetuous youths visiting their brethren, with the hospitality they have enjoyed, have shared the dangers of the day; but Missouri, always mindful of the Constitution, though vitally interested, has hopefully awaited the interposition of the Executive arm for the protection of her energetic emigrating children. She asks for the enforcement of constitutional law and observance of legislative enactments. An arbitration by the sword is her last wish; she has no hope of tranquility which looks beyond the existence of this glorious Union; yet if shorn of her constitutional rights, like the blind giant of old, she will gather to its fall the pillars of the temple."

What now becomes of the bravado of the ruffian Robertson? What has his sympathizers to say in his behalf? The Sharp's Rifles disorganizers.

PROSPECTS OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

In communing daily with the Democracy of every state in the Union, through the hundreds of exchanges on our table, we are enabled to form and express a most satisfactory opinion as to the present condition and prospects of the Democratic party. In the first place, we are enabled to assert, with the fullest confidence, that in sentiment the national Democracy is a unit in regard to the ability, the fidelity, and the success with which its great leading principles have been sustained and promoted by the present administration. This assertion is demonstrated not only by the tone of cordial and earnest approval with which the Democratic press in every state supports the administration, but in the hearty and unequivocal endorsement of its leading policy and measures by every state convention which meets to prepare for the national convention.—Washington Union.

Never since the foundation of the General Government has the Democratic party occupied a loftier and more glorious position than now. It is the only party of principle, consistency, and integrity throughout,—partisan, national, and Union-loving to the core. If an individual assumes aliases to suit existing occasions,—humbugging, cheating, lying and stealing, what do honest people think of him? What, then, should honest people think of Old Hartford Convention, Blue Light Federalism, under its various aliases and guises,—the last especially,—yellow-bellied, Black Republicanism?

Oh! it is true, in these days of political sin and misery,—of total depravity, at least, of Old Federalism, to witness the proud position of the good old time-honored Democratic party; and to reflect how pitiful the attacks are of the vile hordes of Mongrel, puppy, wolph and hound,

And ears of low degree, who have attempted its prostration and the ruin of the country.

THE ANGEL GABRIEL ONCE MORE.

OR, NEGRO RIOTS AND "KNOW-NOTHINGISM" IN DEMARARA.

Accounts of a late date from Demarara, state, that the negroes of British Guiana, stimulated by the harangues of the lunatic Orr, (now unknown in this country as the "Angel Gabriel")—who was conspicuous for putting the "Know-Nothing" ball in motion, had risen against the Portuguese Coolies, who protest the Roman Catholic religion, and that several lives had been lost. Having failed in inflaming the minds or arousing the passions of the ignorant portion of the black population, by violent harangues, in which he imputed every species of crime and immorality to the Roman Catholics, he took advantage of an existing feud between the negro population and the Portuguese immigrants, who are Catholics, and stimulated an excitement against the latter that ultimately broke out into active hostility, and resulted in the pillaging and demolition of the shops of the Portuguese traders in the city. This was followed by like disturbances in the country, throughout the colony, incited by emissaries from the town. The disturbances in the country were even more serious than in the city, being attended with the loss of many lives. The military were obliged to be called out, who succeeded in arresting a number of prisoners; and the most stringent measures were necessary to be adopted to protect the lives and property of the inhabitants.

At home, matters are very quiet this week. The State Legislature have under consideration, a new Exemption Case, which if it passes will repeal all previous exemption acts. A bill relating to Saving Banks has passed the Senate to be engrossed, and this is now before the House. It has relation to investments, which I may notice hereafter if it becomes a law. ## Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Know Nothing.

Who wouldn't be a Know Nothing,
In these degenerate days;
Where Solon's wisdom wouldn't bring,
A penny worth of praise;
Where folly rules the vaunting class;
Where Liberty is sold,
And he who owns a face of brass,
Commands the purse of gold.

Who wouldn't be a Know Nothing,
Where politicians fret,
Because beneath the eagle's wing,
They can't an office get;
Nor make old Uncle Sam believe,
While growling at his heel,
The things they're striving to achieve
Are for the public weal.

Who wouldn't be a Know Nothing,
Where speculators thrite,
Like drones, who only pl'y the wing
To rob the worker's hive;
Who stand between us and our food—
The gift that God has given—
Who quench the fires that warmed our blood,
And toll the gates of heav'n.

Who wouldn't be a Know Nothing,
Where doctors disagree;
While quacks their countless nostrums bring
To cure the fiddle de do;
Where poor folks lack the man of skill,
Whose cash is low or out—
More fearful of the doctor's bill,
Than fever, stone or gout.

Who wouldn't be a Know Nothing,
Where pettifoggers ply,
Like hissing snakes the venom'd sting,
To wheelie, lure and die;
And plead against a righteous cause,
For lucre without shame;
Or turn, and twist, and stretch the laws,
To win a rascal's fame.

Who wouldn't be a Know Nothing,
Where ladies nothing know,
Except to walz the mazy ring,
And dress to catch a beau;

To set their caps for popinjay;
To flaunt their stylish gear;
To fish for undeserved praise,
And at their neighbors sneer.*

Who wouldn't be a Know Nothing,
Where all religions fight;
Where each will make the other swing,
And few regard the right;
Where peace pretending rev'rens foam
Like bullies in a ring;
Who wouldn't rather stay at home
And be a Know Nothing.

Did I love as humbug sing,
The true I could not mean,
But that poor counterfeiter a thing
So very often seen.

True love will in its mate confide—
Will constant to it cling,
And to its harm whate'er betide
Will be a Know Nothing.

A Know Nothing then let me be,
If but allow'd to guess,
Law, physics, love and politics,
Are humbugs, more or less. F. M. A.

*The author confesses that the satire on woman is entirely unmerited by any lady of his acquaintance, and will only apply to such as he has read in novels and romances.

*Where all religions fight—Those who prove their love to God by showing their love to man are excepted of course.

Anecdotes.

A down east skipper, with a boy, was trying to manage a small sloop, when the master of a Liverpool packet, who had been dodging out of the way, incensed at their awkwardness, called out:—

"What slop is that?"

"The Sally, from Maine," cried the Yankee.

"Who commands her?"

"Well, said the Yankee, 'I undertook to, but I saw she's too much for me.'

A lisping, bashful sort of a genius went to see his sweetheart one night, and being rather hard run for matter of conversation, said to her, after a long pause,

"Thally, did you ever hear an owl? What big eyes they got, haint they?"

"I say, Nym," said a person to a Corporal, "I have got a mosquito into my ear, and I am afraid he will get into my head."

"No matter," said the Corporal, "he will find plenty of room."

"What do you ask for this article?" inquired Thomas of a young miss.

"Fifteen shillings."

"Aint you a little dear?"

"Why," she replied, blushing, "all the young men tell me so."

He came straight away.

"Cato, what do you 'spose am de reason de sun goes down towards the souf' in de winter?"

"Well, I dunno, Sambo, unless he no stan' de clemency of de north, and so he is blazed to go to de souf' where he 'spences warmer longitude."

*A sailor, as he was riding, made a pause, and the horse in beating off the flies, caught his foot in the stirrup, the sailor observing it, exclaimed "how now, Dodlin, if you are going to get on, I get off."
